Look into a mirror. What do you see?

You see a reflection; a reflection of your eyes, your hair, your nose, your smile, your tears. Staring back at you is your face, full of emotion and expression. Seeing your feelings directly in front of you causes you to wonder why you feel this way.

Why are your eyes glistening with tears? What made you laugh so hard your cheeks turned red? Who made you furrow your brow in disapproval?

A reflection is not only a picture looking back at you; it is the thoughts that come along with the image. The reminiscing of what has caused you to look like you do at the moment of heightened emotion.

Looking back on your years in high school remember all the things that have made you who you are.

The amazing night you had with your best friend, driving around downtown listening to loud music, the basketball game that had your heart racing and your blood pumping, the walks to McDonald's for lunch that almost made you late for class, the boyfriend who cheated on you and left you crying all first period long.

Good and bad, all of your memories have helped mold and shape you. As you look at the pictures and read the stories in this yearbook, take a moment to reflect on what has brought you to this point in your life.

it's something you remember. -oscar levant

party in the pyramid

Story/Layout by Katie Grimm

ormally, when someone would think of East High, they'd think red, black and Scarlets, right? Well that's not the case for homecoming, the gym and cafeteria was turned into an Egyptian party.

This year's homecoming dance was from 7:30 to 10:30 in the big gym. The dance was on September 30.

"I think making the time earlier this year was kind of stupid, even if it gives you more time to do stuff afterwards, dances are supposed to end later," said junior Jena Bowen.

The theme for this year was "party in the pyramid." Senior Joey Peterson thought this year's theme was "alright, it wasn't anything fancy, but it wasn't really wild either."

Besides coming to the dance and hanging out, there were many preparations for the night. Girls sometimes take longer getting ready than guys, since they have many things to worry about such as finding the perfect dress and accessories, doing their hair, make-up, nails, and looking at themselves hundreds of times before even walking out the door.

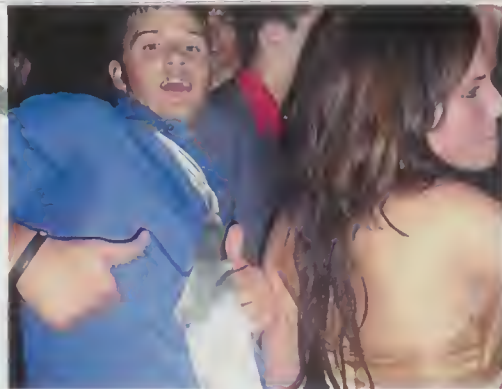

"Before the dance Stephanie Rangel, Rachael Schwartztrauber, and me went out to eat at Steph's grandpa's restaurant, and we took lots of cute 'Marilyn Monroe' pictures by my car," said junior Paige Shannon.

"Getting ready was so much work. I woke up around 9, went and got my fingers and toes done, showered, then Brittany O'Dell and I went to the mall to get our make-up done, and after all that we still had to do our hair and get dressed. We went to Mama Lacona's to eat, and then to the dance," said Bowen.

This year's homecoming court from the freshmen were, Sabreen Al-Hameed, and Levi Cardenes; the sophomore court for this year was Jasmien Clouse, and Will Chapman. From the juniors were Mike Boyd, and Tia Mays. The senior court boys were, Ben Ballard, Aaron DeGoey, Ben Hurley, Amara Sama, and Logan Miller. The senior court girls were Amanda Enochs, Sarah Perkins, Addison Speck, Natasha Siders, and Christina Tharp. This year's homecoming king and queen were DeGoey and Enochs.

Bow, junior Brandon Labelle, sophomore LaRissa Connett, and juniors Ashley Kasper and Colton Collins enjoyed a meal before the dance. They and a few other friends went to Mama Lacona's.

REdeem your spirit

Story/Layout By: Hannah Kilby

To some schools, homecoming week may be just like any other. To EHS, it is a time to show our true Scarlet spirit, the Eastside way.

"I had a lot more fun this year during homecoming week because, me and my friends actually participated," said Sophomore Brittany Scanlon.

During spirit week, each day stands for something different. This year, Monday stood for Character day, Tuesday was Pirate day, Wednesday was Wacky Wednesday, Thursday was red Carpet/Celeb day, and Friday was the traditional Spirit Day.

"My favorite day was Friday because it was awesome seeing all of the EHS school spirit," said Junior Paige Olgren. "Not only did students dress up, but teachers did as well."

Friday, September 29th 2006 at 7:30p.m. was the kick off for the homecoming game. The Varsity football team led us to a proud victory of 24 to 21 against S.C. West.

"I can't even begin to explain the movement of the team after our VICTORY over Sioux City," said Sophomore Juan Rincon.

get cho Hair did.

Story/Layout by Jennifer Harmon

Curly, frizzy, short, straight, blonde, greasy, spiked, long, brown, braided, nappy, green: anything goes when it comes to hair and if that's not good enough, it can always be changed.

One way to alter hair is to dye it. Many people now dye their hair at home. Doing it yourself can be a lot cheaper than a salon, but also riskier.

Junior Nikki Ellis said, "I wanted to go to a darker red, and I always dye my own hair, so I bought some dye and dyed it at home. When I had it on my hair, it looked really orange, so I knew it wasn't going to be good. It turned out nothing like I wanted."

Although going to the salon may be more expensive, there is always the confidence that those dying your hair are professionals and trained to do well. Senior Kacie Eggen trusts her salon to do her hair "because they won't mess it up and if they do, they'll fix it."

The most obvious way a person can change their hair is by getting it cut. Getting a hair cut can be a pretty big deal, or just another task on the to-do list.

"Getting my hair cut is never really a big deal. I usually just get a trim, since I don't have layers or anything," said senior Addison Speck.

For people like junior Clinton Cunningham, hair can be a conversation starter. Cunningham's mullet has people talking.

"When I walk down the hall people say 'Dude, there's a mullet,'" said Cunningham. "Whenever I walk in somewhere people stare and talk about it"

Radical hairstyles also show school pride. Dying hair red and black is a common accessory for football games. Junior Stanley Fredericksen used temporary red hair dye for football games. Sophomore RJ Harris also shows his Scarlet pride by shaving his hair into a mohawk.

"The first time I got a mohawk was because East made it to state for basketball and since our mascot is the Indian I thought it'd look good," said Harris.

To some, mohawks, mullets and dye can seem a little out of the ordinary, but teacher Stan Thompson says that he "doesn't see anything too wild" when it comes to his students hair.

"I've seen everything. It all comes and goes with the times," said Thompson.

Nancy Crabb [12] - If you cut your hair like this, it's all natural." Jiear vang [12]

"I used to have waves in my hair. I did it with my brush and grease. They looked nice. Girls like the waves."

-stuart hall [12]

"When it comes to my hair you either like it or you don't like it at all. Drautz always tells me I need to get it cut."

-david davis [10]

"I'm not afraid to do anything with my hair because it grows back. Plus, if you cut it too short, there are always extensions."

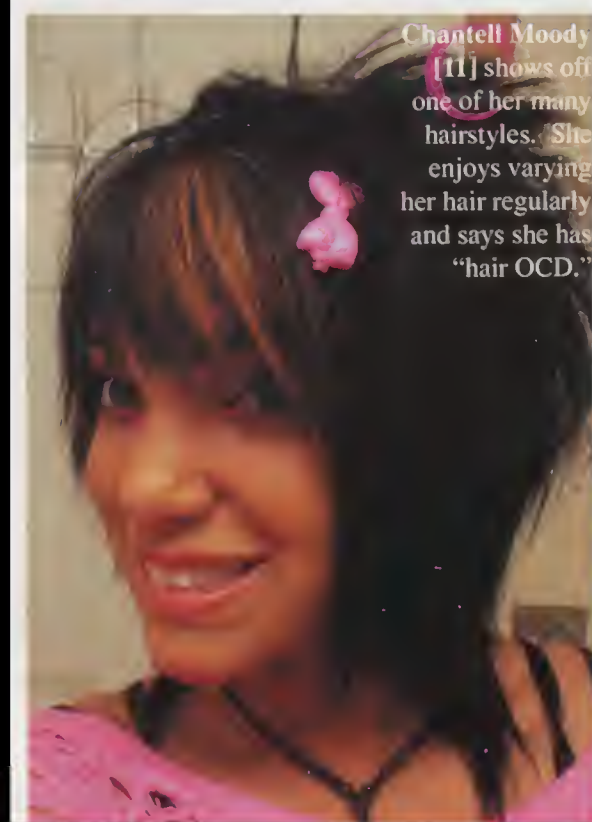

-tasha siders [12]

Stanley Fredericksen [11] and Brittany O'Dell [11] show their school spirit in all red. Face painting and hair dye top off the look.

As Joe Rivas [12] looks in the mirror, he combs through his curly hair. Rivas's hair has gone through many transitions throughout high school including extensions, gel, and straightening.

Chantell Moody [11] shows off one of her many hairstyles. She enjoys varying her hair regularly and says she has "hair OCD."

Although the other beads are hidden, Sydney Williams's [12] dreadlocks are filled with screws, beads, and other decoration. Williams has had her dreads since 9th grade.

Nikki Ellis [11] waits to rinse out her hair dye. She dyes her hair whenever she wants a change.

"I don't really have space in my trunk for anything, because my subs and amp take up so much space."

"I have a lot of stuff in my trunk: picture books, sequins, glitter, clothes, CD's, makeup, candy, hair dye, socks with no matches, and lots of bling."

"I don't have much in my trunk really. I think I only have a blanket in there right now."

GOT JUNK?

Story/Layout By: Hannah Kilby

Maribeth Mullin is one of the few sophomores to have a car; however, she is one of the many students at East to have a car. "hairspray, basketball, shoes, chips, books, trash, paper, pictures, movies, tools, volleyball, shopping bags, spare tire, a gas can, junk, everything, were some of the common responses to the question, what do you have in your trunk?"

"I have everything in my trunk, I throw so much crap in there," said Mullen.

Many EHS students have way more stuff in their trunk than necessary. Seventy five percent of these students are not even sure of what all is in their trunk.

"I have anything and everything in my trunk," said junior Abigail Miller. "It is like a second closet to me."

Clothes and shoes were the most popular responses regarding "junk in your trunk."

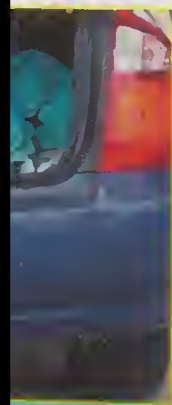

"Maybe, junk in your trunk isn't so bad," said senior Josie Sacco. "I like my trunk to be clean, but it depends on the driver's opinion."

If seventy five percent of EHS students just throw everything in their trunks then how much is too much?

"My best friend and I both have like a ton of stuff in my trunk, there are a ton of shopping bags, clothes and shoes in there," said junior Casie Johnson. "It's bad enough with just me and my shopping obsession, but with both of our shopping obsessions, things can get a little packed."

Three out of every four students surveyed, said that they haven't cleaned their trunk out since school started.

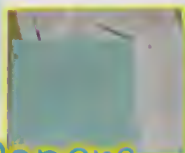

"I have QuikTrip cups galore in my cars backseat and trunk. I just throw everything from my backseat to my trunk," said junior Adam Geiger. "I like my car clean and could really care less about my trunk, nobody really sees it anyway."

MISSION:

to create the world's greatest yearbook

It's been talked about years before for the class of 2007, to give the 07/ James Bond label associated with their graduation year. The yearbook staff transforms this idea in a mission to attempt to create the world's greatest yearbook.

There are a lot of key components in order to have a successful yearbook and there are tasks that need to be completed by certain people with creative minds.

"A great yearbook needs essentials such as creative layouts & designs that preserve the memories and events of the school year," senior co-editor Abby Grover. "One of the most important factors behind a good yearbook is having amazing people who are dedicated to making it the best."

"One of the most important things is to have a good design," said senior co-editor Sydney Williams. "The yearbook should be a collection of memories that are put together in a way that is visually attractive."

A great yearbook is not something without interesting stories and intelligent and superior writing techniques. This involves journalism-style writing and interviewing the right people.

Junior Jorden McGriff said, "It got easier as the year passed by and more to manage, but it's a lot of fun."

So many things can make a yearbook fail. Which include poor theme, uncooperative staff members and especially deadlines. Deadlines are a hard thing to meet in which portions of the book are not finished. The yearbook staff has to make sure that the yearbook is finished on time. The 2007 yearbook has a theme of "When...". Some of the staff members have said that they are proud of the yearbook.

Katie Sturtz, a senior, said, "I hope next year is just as much fun as this year. I hope to make it the best book with it being my senior year." Casie Johnson ($100 reward-dead or alive) junior quill member

"I like to help," said junior Phillip Pacha. Pacha feels that it's not only helping the school, but him as well.

"He's a great student in class, you can tell that his confidence is way up," said teacher Kevin Sorensen.

"That kid is my hero. I haven't taken back one lunch tray this year!" Said junior Justin Duckworth

You might have seen him at lunch, roaming around the tables, picking up the empty trays, wiping away spilt drinks, or just helping someone find a chair. This might've just looked some helpful student, but to junior Phillip Pacha, this was more than just picking up trays.

"Phillip is a great student in class, we felt that he just needed to get out and socialize," said teacher Kevin Sorensen. "Working in the cafeteria is a great place for him to socialize and interact with people."

This was Pacha's participating in the work-study program, a school organized job for students to work on their employment skills and work exploration, communication with superiors, respect for others, responsibility, good attendance, and to make some money.

"There are other types of work-study programs; many of them are in the summer though. So when they said they could use some help in the cafeteria, we thought that Phillip would fit the bill," said Sorensen.

Everyday, Pacha spent his lunch period working in the cafeteria, helping out the lunch ladies, picking up trays, and helping to keep the cafeteria clean, and in doing so, learned some important social skills for his future.

"He's becoming more approachable," said Sorensen. "The program has given him more confidence around people and with his classmates."

Pacha agrees that the program has helped him be more comfortable around people; he plans on continuing the work program throughout high school.

"Phillip is a great kid," said work counselor Sid Gordon. "He is becoming a hard worker, he likes working, and he's always on time. I can tell that he is going to be a great employee someday."

Double Trouble

Ever wonder what it's like to be a twin? For seniors Brittney and Nikki Robbins, they ask just the opposite.

"I can't say that I don't ever wonder what it's like to not be a twin," said Brittney. "I would rather be a twin, though, because someone is always there for me to talk to."

There are four different types of twins: identical, fraternal, polar body, and siamese. Identical twins are when they look exactly alike. Fraternal twins can be different sexes or the same sex but have different physical features. Polar body twins have only half of their chromosomes identical. Siamese twins are identical and conjoined.

"I like being an identical twin, except for when people mix us up," said sophomore Shardaine Manson. "It can get very annoying when it happens all the time."

At East, there are many sets of twins. It's common to walk down the halls and have to take another look because you think you're seeing double. It's also common to see a set and think to yourself "how can they be twins?"

"Nikki and I are twins, but we could never switch places without anyone knowing, because we don't look enough alike," said junior Alyssa Ellis.

Some twins have rougher lives than others. For the Niswander twins life is a lot different. Gabriella and Zoey are identical twins; the major difference is that Gabriella is physically impaired.

"As I look at the difference between me and my sister, I try to put myself in her shoes, but I can't fully comprehend what it's like to be limited by mobility," said freshman Zoey.

Next time you wonder what it's like to be a twin, try to realize that being a twin can be more than just an appearance.

Sophomore Amy Ritchie walks into the Billy Joe Picture Show Theater with her friends to enjoy yet another interesting night showing of the Rocky Horror Picture show.

"My friends and I like going to Billy Joe's on the weekends. I love that you can be totally unconventional. At a regular movie theater people throw things at you if you yell at the screen, but at Billy Joe's it is "expected" that you participate in the audience participation. It's nice to just be wild and let go after a long week at school," said Ritchie.

Ritchie along with many other students, find their own unique ways to unwind when the long-awaited weekend finally comes after a drowned out week of homework and tiresome classes.

"I usually hang out at Merle Hay Mall with my friends. We don't always go there to buy things; we just like getting out and being together. Even though I see my friends every day at school there is just something more fun about hanging out outside of school, even if it is just to walk around the mall," said senior William Sowder.

Not all teenagers need to leave their homes to have a great time when the weekend approaches. Junior Jessica Smith tends to spend most of her weekend in her very own backyard.

"My older brother fixed up our indoor patio in our backyard. We have heaters, couches, a pool table, and a TV that we play video games on. The Patio (the name given to this hangout spot) has become the new hip place for me and my friends to chill each weekend," said Smith.

Southern Spirit

Story/layout by Jorden McGriff

Mardi Gras is known as the bead-slinging, over-the-top festival held in New Orleans, Louisiana every year around the middle of February.

This party took on a new identity when East High students got in on the action on February 3, 2007 at the Mardi Gras themed Winter Formal.

When students walked into the familiar cafeteria, they found it to be transformed into a mixture of purples, gold, greens, and of course, tons of multi-colored Mardi Gras beads.

Winter Formal was the last dance of the year for those who didn't attend prom, so it was important that all went according to plan.

"The DJ was good and the decorations were nice so, if you ask me, Winter Formal went very well," said junior Amanda Roth. "This was the first Winter Formal I've been to and I was pretty impressed."

Winter Formal didn't fall together perfectly without a little hard work and a lot of planning.

Pep E Club organizes the Winter Formal bash each year, since the tradition started a few years ago.

They decided on every detail, from the theme to the colors, right down to the DJ that was hired.

Early morning meetings for planning each detail, and late night decorating sessions that brought out the Mardi Gras spirit, all went into making this dance a success for the Pep E Club and fun for the students attending.

"Everything about art relates to the world. Art is what civilizations are remembered by. Even if students don't end up using art in their daily lives, they keep it in their hearts and it's something for them to feel good about," said Shirley Gooch, reflecting on her love of teaching students the many creative techniques and projects offered in art class.

Students say that coming to class relieves them from the stress of their busy days.

"Art is so much fun because I always have something to do. The time goes by fast and it always calms me down and helps me relax. It's a good class because it varies from the core classes. It's something fun that you look forward to during the day," said senior Katie Smith.

Painting, sketching and abstract projects are common in art class, but Gooch loves teaching students how to draw self-portraits and the students love learning.

"I love doing the shading on self-portraits. When you're finally done, it's very rewarding," said junior Jordan Bixler.

Some students take art to help prepare them for a career.

Senior Chirasath Saenvong hopes to start his own Anime comic.

"I take art to help improve my skills and see how far I can go with it in my life. My mom told me I started drawing when I was one so I've been doing it forever," he said.

After the multi-million dollar renovation, art students now have higher working tables compared to the elementary-style desks previously used. The classrooms are more spacious and there is new equipment for more advanced projects.

"I love teaching in this room because it is a wonderful and creative environment. We are really enjoying it, the renovations are incredible," said Gooch.

Freshman Molly Hinman walks into Kacia Cain's biology class and notices the agenda for the day consists of growing and learning about Arabidopsis plants.

Its activities like these that Hinman and the rest of the students do while in biology class.

"I like biology," said Hinman, "because of all the cool things we do."

Biology students will learn concepts like cell division all the way to DNA and its roles in the human body.

Students also do a lot of fun hands on projects and labs.

"My favorite project to do with the students is the BT corn project. It helps teach the students about DNA and it makes learning fun," said Cain.

Biology isn't always easy, though. Students have to learn difficult skills that will help them prepare for more advanced science courses, so students know that biology isn't a fluff class.

"Class can be hard," said sophomore Jessica Gaines, "but my teacher Mr. Long makes it very interesting so it's easy for me to do well in his class. Plus he is really funny."

Lowell Long along with the rest of the biology teachers, does whatever needed to make the class more fun and appealing to their students.

"The most important thing to me is being able to watch my students go from not understanding a concept to all of a sudden comprehending, it makes it all worth it. My goal is by the end of the year, my students will walk out my door with a greater understanding of science and a better appreciation for it. Hopefully it will spark up enough interest for them to pursue other science classes," said Long.

To graduate from high school students need to complete at least two years in a lab science and biology qualifies as one of the lab sciences. After biology many students choose to continue on with science courses.

"After I'm done with biology I want to take chemistry and physics," said freshman Kevin Cole.

ATTENTION! FUTURE ARCHITECTS, CONSTRUCTION WORKERS, ENGINEERS

Story/Layout by Katie Grimm

Interested in a career being an architect, construction worker, or engineer in the future, ever taken the time to think closely about what career to pursue after high school?

See where this is going? No promotions, no advertising, in no way saying "this is the way to go to be successful!," just informing the student body about a new program arising at East, that maybe some people interested should check out.

The ACE Program helps students who choose to have a career in the architecture, construction, or engineering fields get the knowledge and training to get the best job possible.

"Drafting is the language of building. Carpentry is the art of building. Architecture is a part of drafting that is responsible for designing and planning of buildings," said Woodshop teacher Jeff Hall.

"The reason that the reason we [the mentors & sponsoring companies] are involved is that there is a shortage of students entering the ace fields and we hope this will expose some students & get them to consider it as a profession," said branch manager Andy Thielen, from KJWW Engineering Consultants.

Hall, along with science teacher Nancy Duncan are liaisons of the ACE Program at East. The program gives students knowledge of construction, and travels to jobsites to watch people who already have those jobs. Although the program has been around for a few years, East adapted the program this year, and about 35 students participated. The students and mentors met in the library after school on Tuesdays.

"The ACE program incorporates disciplines that we teach," said Hall.

Students in this program increased their chances of getting a real job in the future, and also helped them get a reserved position in the field right now, while still attending high school. In this program students didn't just learn how to do the job, because anyone can teach a person that, professional architects, engineers, and contractors also taught students how to communicate with others on the jobsite.

"This program is a good thing for students who wish to be in that kind of career, it is like they get 'college' and high school all at the same time," said junior Eddie Clearwater.

The Tech Ed. Department is trying to coordinate a program called "Project Lead the Way" [PLTW] that focuses on engineering skills. This program would be held during school along with the ACE program after school.

"We put into place the ACE program this year and are planning to implement the PLTW program at the start of '08-09 school year," said Hall.

Students in Derek Lounsberry's Multimedia class work on personal presentation projects. They were to choose something in life, and "become an expert" on it, then present to the class.

Students in Ken Burgess' class work on a financial project. They had to purchase a stock and watch its performance.

Students listen patiently to a project presentation. The class had to inform each other about something in their lives that was important to them.

The class listens quietly as a student gives a presentation about her dog and how she takes care of it. Classes did many of these throughout the year.

Business Credits Earned at East:

Word Processing:	4	Accounting:	3
Powerpoint:	1	Principles of selling:	3
COOP:	6	Desktop Publishing:	3
Computer Applications:	3

When students think of business, or a business class, what's the first thing that comes to mind? Junior Eddie Clearwater says a class where you learn about starting a business makes him think...money.

At East many classes are offered in the business department, ranging from keyboarding and computer applications, to economics, accounting and personal finance management. Senior Chelsey Randolph takes personal finance management and says it's a class where you learn to "manage your finances, and buy homes" and how to budget your money. "Most people think that in Econ you just sell stuff, but really we have to do more than that, we have to purchase a product and figure out how much of our product we need and how much to sell the products for," said junior Kacey Wollesen.

When taking these classes, students feel like they are actually in college taking the courses. They also get the college credit that they would if they were in college taking the class, but the students only receive credits if they attend DMACC in the future.

The way classes are graded depends on how much the teacher thinks the course content should effect grades.

Business teacher Kenneth Burgess grades the classes like a high school class, except the students are required to do more reading and tests are at a college level of difficulty.

"Keyboarding was a really fun class, when we had to put the cloth over our hands really helped me learn where the keys were," said junior Olivia Graham.

The standard enthalpy of formation of a compound is defined as the change in enthalpy that accompanies the mole of a compound from its element with all substance in their standard states.

Know what this means? Gaining knowledge isn't the only reason that students learn and teachers teach the subjects of chemistry and physics.

"At first it was difficult to learn all the material in advance chemistry, but I like that part about it because that's what makes it challenging," said sophomore Jennifer Chang.

"The worst part of teaching advance chemistry would be getting kids coming into the room that don't understand how to learn on their own," said Maureen Griffin.

"The best part of it would be getting the students that have the 'light bulb moments' making sense." Students take these weighted courses for many reasons, including a raised GPA, college credit and other benefits.

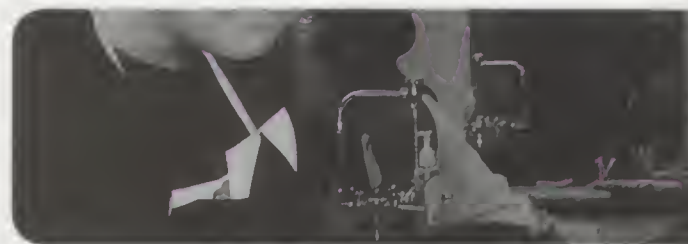

Senior Alicia Dale said "I love chemistry. It's just a fun environment to be in."

Physics teacher Nancy Duncan was a student teacher in the biology/chemistry department two years ago and this is a whole new subject to her as well.

She is now getting her master's degree. "It's a hard subject to learn even for me," said Duncan. "I'm still taking classes for my endorsements."

"The reason why I take physics because I want to solve equations that deal with the real world and to earn college credit," said senior Ashley Van Gorp.

Cross-apply the argument against the criterion to the first contention—group these arguments because essentially they’re the same. Move down to the 2nd contention. He drops my argument against the first card, flow it across.

You can’t vote on this because...

Each activity has its own language and debate is no different. The particular paragraph above is for LD debate, but there are three formats of debate at East, each with its own style and language.

“We each have our own specialty, but we are involved in other kinds too—I do LD, but I can debate congress or public forum,” said sophomore Raymen Robinson.

LD or Lincoln Douglas is a philosophical form of debate in a one vs. one set-up. Congress is debate for a room full of people based around the legislative style, using Robert’s Rules of Order. Public forum is two vs. two debate on contemporary issues.

Coach Jennifer Medina said, “These three forms each highlight different specialties that are unique to the format or type of debate and the people in it.”

The debate team also does speech events. These are monologues and dialogues that the people performing find and then act out for a room, or speeches they write themselves. “Speech events are fun; I like acting and writing so speech is a chance for me to speak on whatever I want and express myself,” said junior Jessica Avant.

Every debater finds a specialty that highlights their own unique talents, fits their personality, and gives them their own language.

“We try to find something that fits the person, but everyone enjoys being competitive, meeting people, and learning—as long we are willing to work hard, anyone can join,” said Medina.

Juniors Marylee Adams and John Thompson meet their fellow classmate, Michael Garrison.

"Action, cut, playback!"

It was time for some more drama in 2006.

Ruth Ann Gaines says this year's play was something that brought back memories for her, as well as many others that came to see Bye Bye Birdie.

"We did the same play in 1974; it's an old play and I thought it would be a good one to bring back," said Gaines.

The fictional play takes place in 1958 and revolves around the rock and roll star, Conrad Birdie, played by sophomore Bobby Starace, in the town of Sweet Apple.

"I loved the play and the character that I played," said Starace. "The play was a little cheesy, but that's what made it funny."

To get to the stage level, you obviously have to love drama, but during class it's not all about the acting.

"We read plays, wrote scenes, analyzed plays, and wrote play reviews," said junior drama student John Thompson.

Since this is drama class there is some acting involved. The class did skits on rape, racism, violence and rumors, and then they went to various middle schools and performed. One of the stories was about a girl that was raped and how she overcame her fear to finally tell someone.

"I think it was a good story, it taught kids to not be afraid to tell someone if something like that happens to them or one of their friends," said junior drama student Sarah Johnson.

Many of the students have been taking drama for three or four years and don't plan on stopping with graduation.

"I've been taking drama since I was a sophomore and I hope to continue when I get to college," said senior drama student Jessica Hargis.

As freshman Ben Sigmand sat down for the first day of class he found a new book sitting on his desk, he opened it up and found it something good for the year.

Although East students were not sure they could keep these brand new hard-cover Earth Science books, they at least had the chance to try them out for a semester with a "class-set."

"Science interests me, it's pretty cool. For those people who like science these new books can be interesting," said Sigmand. This past year the books were used on volcano labs and to look up what kind of rocks and minerals were in different parts around the world. The books are not planned to stay in the classes unless teachers and district officials accept them.

"These books are better, more colorful and full with new stuff to learn; the district officials should decide to keep them for new freshmen," said freshman Layla Schwartztrauber.

If these books are chosen to stay, this is not the only new thing upcoming freshman will be trying out for the first time. A new curriculum for students is being arranged. As 8th graders, they chose what kind of science they want for their first year. They have the decision to decide between Earth Science or physics B, and with approval they can even take biology or chemistry.

"It is pretty cool that freshmen can pick between classes, I didn't get the chance to do that," said sophomore Fatima Ceballos.

In the middle of all the rock and mineral labs, Earth Science teachers John Rudisill and Amy Jacobson are thinking of new things to do for the upcoming freshmen and deciding if the books now being considered as class sets are going to be the new books Earth Science classes are getting.

"Mrs. Jacobson and I are currently sharing ideas and materials. Maybe next year we can have our very own materials," said Rudisill.

For now Sigmand can enjoy the use of a brand new book, and even if the Earth Science classes don't get new materials, at least Sigmand and other students had the chance to learn with a new book.

"It's about time we get new materials, this book teaches in a more advanced way," said Sigmand.

English & speech

Senior Kyle Kilby has butterflies as he walks to his speech class knowing he will have to present his speech in front of everyone.

"When I first started the class I was nervous when I got up to speak," said Kilby. "But later on in the year it became no big deal."

Kilby, along with other high school students, have to have one speech credit and all four years of English to graduate.

Not all the classes have these requirements.

Teachers recommend taking all four years of English, required or not.

"Every career that I can think of you have to communicate," said English teacher

Michelle McPherson. "This is just one reason English class is important."

Teachers try to make learning more fun by celebrating William Shakespeare's birthday on April 23.

On this day they pass out cake to whoever can recite one of Shakespeare's quotes.

"I was never good at remembering quotes," said junior Chase Hall.

"But when they said cake, I memorized some."

They also celebrate poetry month, which is also in April.

Teachers bring a lot of poetry for their classes to read and that's their main topic for the month. "

I think speech is fun, you learn a lot without all the worksheets," said junior Amber Huggins. "And the teachers pick good topics to speak on."

The English teachers are working together to come up with some extra English electives for students in the future years. Some ideas include: radio/TV, where students would practice being on the air, independent reading, where the students would be able to read whatever they want, women's literature, and a science fiction course, where students would learn a lot about the past. These have not yet been approved.

"I think students would like these electives," said McPherson.

"It gives them something other than plain old English." So is it possible to get anywhere without English? "It's not bad, and when you think about it, there isn't a career out there where you can succeed without English," said Kilby.

Juniors Glen Welch, Joseph Jackson, Tycarr Floyd, and Burdette Kelsey participate in the headband game in relationships class. They had to treat others the way their headbands said.

Students in child development read and acted out stories to younger kids that students brought to class.

Students play crying baby (a game similar to old maid) in relationships class. This taught the students the stages of early life.

an growth development

Senior Jaspreet Singh walks into school tired and worn out from having to take a life-like baby home for child development. "Having a baby is a big responsibility," said Singh, "and having to take the baby home made me realize I am too young to have a child."

Singh and other child development students have come to the same conclusion. In child development students get to take the baby home where they experience what it is like to have a baby and still go to school.

When the baby cries you have to do several tasks to see what is wrong such as: changing the diaper, feeding the baby, or just holding and giving it attention. "It was one long night for me," said Singh. "I don't know how I made it to school the next day."

The class also allows students to carry around an empathy belly which is a big strap on belly that is heavy and makes them feel pregnant. Family and consumer science also includes classes like relationships, adult living, and parenting. Relationships gets you ready for marriage and teaches you how to handle certain situations.

"I took the class so I can make the right decisions with my partner when I get older," said junior Amber McNeeley.

The class also studies all kinds of diseases such as: AIDS, HIV, syphilis, and many more. The classes had a guest speaker that talked about how you get HIV and what affects it can have on you. "It was interesting and scary knowing that there are all these diseases out there," said McNeeley.

In parenting students get the chance to visit and help teach at a close by daycare. They teach preschoolers, which will help them when they have children.

"I thought it was so much fun to help teach the little kids," said junior Abby Miller. "It made me more patient with the kids, too."

The students learn how much commitment it will take to have a child and the roles you have when you have one, they also learn how to take care of kids at all ages.

In adult living students are given the skills for independent living and are taught about money management. They study personal safety, basic first aid, career planning, and housing decisions.

"Adult living is going to give you skills for personal and family life," said teacher Donna Adams.

"I was just going to take these classes to get my credits the easy way," said Miller.

"But they turned out to be pretty helpful."

Practical Life Skills

Creativity; you might be thinking art right? Well, you're right, it is art, but it's not art with paint and a brush. These artists have different tools like sewing needles and thread, sketches and fabric, and cooking utensils to create their artwork.

"For fashion, you need to be able to work with all different types of fabrics, styles, designs, and patterns," said freshman Bria Johnson. Practical life skills, which is half of the family consumer science department; sewing, fashion, foods, and interior design, gives students the chance to get their heads out of boring old textbooks and out on the floor; the kitchen floor, in some cases. "We cook a lot in foods class, we're barely ever sitting at desks with books," said sophomore Jessie Frazier. "I'm big for hands on, but I also like to make use of the other learning models as well; auditory and visual learning," said cooking and interior design teacher Kathy Crum. "I believe that they learn more when they are able to apply it." Students are sometimes allowed to bring in their own food of choice to cook. "We get to eat it, too," said sophomore foods student Jenny Chai.

In interior design, students take a look at the influences on housing, housing needs, housing design, and architectural features. They also work with budget decorating, because some people can't afford to decorate their first apartment or house.

"You need to have creativity and style," said junior Paul Landers. Style is something the fashion classes definitely have. They are always hip with the latest trends, what's hot and what's not, and what looks good on each individual. Not only do they learn about fashion as it is right now, but they learn the history of fashion. To help learn how fashion got where it is today, the classes took a trip to the historical building. "It was really cool to see how different fashion is now from how it used to be," said freshman Madison Kasper.

"Students remember and learn things better when they see it through real life experiences," said fashion teacher DeAnn Hebert.

"I think everyone has a measure of creativity, the practical life skills classes simply lets them explore it," said Crum.

Language

From the many clubs that students are involved in, Spanish and French clubs aren't the most known, but from what the members are saying they have to be one of the most fun and rewarding.

"The best part about being in Spanish club is that you get to meet new people, you get to visit a lot of Spanish places and you get to have lots of fun," said junior Marylee Adams.

The Spanish club accomplishes many things all year long. September 9 and 10 accounted for the first official project of the club. The members went downtown to the Latin Heritage Festival where they volunteered to work at the concession stands, help kids with the rides and the bouncy house, or just help out wherever they were needed.

"We were very excited to go to the festival, we had a lot of fun helping out," said Spanish teacher and head of the club, Linnea Morris.

French club, sponsored by Amanda Eimers, also goes on many trips. To restaurants such as La Mie and The Art Center, they also go on other, more extensive trips.

"In previous years we have gone to the Jocelyn Art Museum and the Henry Doorly Zoo in Omaha," said Eimers.

"We plan on going to see the Phantom of the Opera at the Civic Center at the beginning of the year."

These are the only two language clubs here at East, but with more than fifty kids involved, they have to be the fastest growing groups.

"Club is a very fun thing to be involved in, you get to learn more about and from a lot of different cultures and countries, you get to meet people and most of all you just get to have a good time, and volunteering makes you feel good about yourself and your school," said senior Breanna Fousek.

Below: Senate candidate Jeff Lamberti takes time from the campaign trail to speak to the government students in November.

The words “government” and “economics” may seem irrelevant to any high school student’s life of jam-packed football games, picture-perfect dances, and never-ending parties, but thanks to teachers like Stan Thompson, Ted Christensen, Don Heese, and Samy El-Baroudi, juniors and seniors get a real-life look at the ways of the world.

Government and Economics are both semester classes that are required for graduation.

Government students take the fundamentals of American government apply them to their daily lives and current events.

As for the age-old question of why take something like government in high school, there’s one simple answer.

“Self-government isn’t effective if the citizens don’t know how it works,” said Heese.

Economics may be more interesting to students; after all, it is all about money! El-Baroudi’s classes run a classroom-based company for a semester. The students decide on and sell items they think will appeal to students and staff.

Choosing a product isn’t always easy.

Morphing many people with different opinions into one group can create heated discussions.

“It took us a while to decide on our product, but we ended up choosing ‘crunk cups’. They have sold pretty well so far; students and teachers like the idea and have been buying them, and that’s what we wanted in a product,” said senior Josh Strother.

Daydreaming has nothing to do with history, but junior Jena Bowen usually sits in American History class wishing she was in a different place. Bowen isn't alone; many students say the thought of going to class everyday makes them cringe inside.

Many students find history to be boring, saying "sitting in class for 45 minutes talking about how the world was one-thousand years ago isn't exactly what would be called fun."

"I pretty much fall asleep everyday during class," said Bowen. On the contrary, some students find history class to be very interesting.

"I actually like American History class, I think the way Ms. Schaefer teaches has a lot to do with it," said junior Afton Torres.

Teachers have the wonderful job of finding ways to keep students interested in class, so that they aren't falling asleep or not paying attention at all.

{ Teacher Don Heese passes out worksheets to his junior American History class. Heese likes to use worksheets, educational videos, and projects to get his students interested in history. }

"It's really more of a class that gives you 'life skills' more than anything else," said senior student Ben Ballard about the Home Remodeling program. Ballard is one of the many students that believe the program is about more than just building a house.

It is about helping each other get a job well done.

Junior Nathan Hunsley said, "I like to work as a class because of the teamwork that is involved with it and the final product of a house that looks much better than what the class started with."

This year brought some changes. An ordinary home was rebuilt with the Energy Star feature in the program, and it was the second two-story home that was built. A large cottonwood tree also had to be removed on the remodeling site in order for renovation to begin on the home.

"The safety of the kids becomes a big factor when they are working with a two-story home," said teacher Bill Oleson. "The Energy Star addition helps save and conserve as much energy as possible. We had a great neighborhood to work in that was very supportive of the program this year."

The program teaches the elements of building trades, building houses, electricity, carpentry, plumbing, and heating and cooling in the construction industry. It requires teamwork and handyman skills to successfully construct a house.

"You learn pretty quickly in the program," said senior Kyle Reasoner. "I like seeing the house trashed at the beginning of the project, and then seeing the house much improved by the end of the year."

The class gives hands-on training for many of the kids who want to know about, and be involved in, the construction industry. It gives kids with mechanical abilities a chance at different future job choices.

Senior Blake Horeh said the program "opens up (career opportunities) for people who might not have hook smarts."

Reynolds said that Oleson looks at the attendance of students who want to join. The students must be at least sophomores. He added that Oleson is "more of a friend" than a teacher to his students.

"Oleson wants people that work hard and don't goof around" to join his class, said senior Tiffany Daugherty.

"He's a nice guy and was fun to work with," Daugherty likes knowing that if she has a problem with her home, she can fix it herself instead of calling someone to do the work for her.

Oleson takes his program seriously, but all the kids that are involved in it know where he lives, and are welcome to come and chat with him at his house if they need advice.

According to Horeh, "Oleson doesn't like slackers to be involved with his class, but he would put his credibility on the line to help his students out in life."

Ballard said, "If he can't help you out, he knows people who can."

After all the years of construction and being stuck with the smallest room in the industrial wing, the graphics and drafting classes have finally received the print shop that they have been longing for.

"The new classroom is so much better than it was last year," said junior Tim Bolander. "This is probably one of my favorite classes now, since it's so different."

This is the first time since the renovation that the classes have been able to put up their commercial printing machinery.

The newly-finished classrooms also received tables and desks from art teacher Shirley Gooch.

Teacher Tom Cole used the tables as one of the class's first projects; the class sanded them, and refinished the tops, turning some of them into drafting tables.

"These tables would've cost a lot of money for us to replace, but these tables look like they will last us for quite a few years," said Cole.

In the previous years, changing subjects throughout the class year would result in rearranging many things in his classroom, but now they just have to walk into a different room. Inside the print shop, there are interior rooms as well, a darkroom for developing photos, a room specifically for screen printing, one for creating print flats for the commercial printers, and another room for light tables.

"It was really difficult to work last year when everything was put away," said junior Alexis Timm, who took Graphics Fundamentals last year. "We usually just worked on the computers since we were always stuck in that small room."

"I'm pretty sure that we're the last classroom in the industrial wing to receive an update," said Cole. "It's better late than never."

math

Parabolas, lines of symmetry, and the quadratic formula all equal one thing: math. To some students, math class means more confusion and struggle in their busy high school schedules. According to www.greatschools.net, in 2005, 36 percent of high school students in the Des Moines Independent school districts scored below average in the area of math on the ITEDs (Iowa Test of Educational Development).

Some juniors and seniors taking advanced math such as pre-calculus or calculus have a tougher time grasping difficult mathematic concepts. Senior Karissa Morton constantly experiences troubles with her calculus work.

"Calculus is challenging because it's a lot of different concepts that tie together, so if you don't get one part of it you're completely lost. I'm happy to be taking it now though because it prevents me from taking it in college," said Morton.

According to teacher Karen Cross, math helps students to prepare for further schooling and it helps them understand broader subjects.

"Math is important for everyone because it makes people think logically. It should help to prepare high school students for college in any subject because it shows the importance of working daily on a subject for overall understanding," said Cross.

No matter what math class you may have struggled in, many students agree that the best advice given to them was to simply keep trying.

"It's important to pay attention, take good notes and do your homework. Don't give up because the more you do it, the more you'll get it," said senior Tiara Mays.

The sun starts to go down as senior Lyndsay Hanson gets ready to take a picture for class. A sunset shot, and many other themes of pictures are part of the required work of Hanson and the other students in Marty Mohler's photography classes.

"I have been in this class for two years. I really like photography and taking pictures, this is something I think I can stick with for awhile," said Hanson.

Photography isn't like any other class at East. Students don't have to worry about bringing books, or about studying for a test being given the next week. All they have to do is come with a head full of images and a desire for pictures.

"Just coming to class knowing all I have to do is take and work with pictures, and not take pages of notes, makes class more fun; I also like being creative with the pictures I take," said junior Kacey Wollesen.

There are three types of photography classes provided. Photo 1 was offered to students who are taking the class for the first time. After they finish that, they can take Advanced Photo, and if they wish to go further, Independent Study Photo.

"I'm getting more into photography now. I really had fun in class finding different things to take pictures of," said junior Paige Shannon.

Two years ago the photography department received new Dell computers loaded with Corel Draw graphic software and Adobe Photoshop Elements, and there are some more plans for next fall.

"I hope to get software updates for all my computers, including new updates for Adobe Photoshop, and my Corel software; I'd be happy with that," said Mohler. Over the semester students were sent out during class with a Canon camera, along with an assortment of filters to take pictures. Students were to take the pictures, edit them however they would like, and make a portfolio with them. Portfolios are graded based on the theme of the picture, clarity, and quality.

"I have fun altering pictures because I feel like it's really my picture," said Hanson.

Psychology isn't anything new to teacher Ted Christensen, but teaching it is. With more than 23 years of teaching Econ and American Government under his belt, Christensen steps into the teaching position for psychology.

With the first semester focusing on sociology and the study of group behavior and the second semester being the trial run for psychology and the study of individual behavior. Christensen believes that teaching this at a high school level benefits each student individually.

"These courses help prepare the students for college classes, giving them the basic knowledge and understanding of group and individual behavior," said Christensen.

With the classes containing mostly seniors and a few juniors, the students seem to take what they learn from class to their outside life.

"You start to observe others behaviors and why they do what they do," said senior Jennifer Radley.

At the start of the year, the sociology classes studied animal and human behavior. Some students agreed that most of sociology was more difficult with the "weird terms and hasis for social work, unlike analyzing people one on one like psychology," said junior Christine Her.

"Sociology dealt more with trying to figure out why a group of people act a certain way, and it is a lot harder than just trying to figure out one person," said Her.

When taking this class, there are more career fields that would require some understanding of the human mind than just the obvious therapist or psychologist.

"The business field is to be considered, hecause knowing how your employees or peers respond and work will also work well to your advantage," said Christensen.

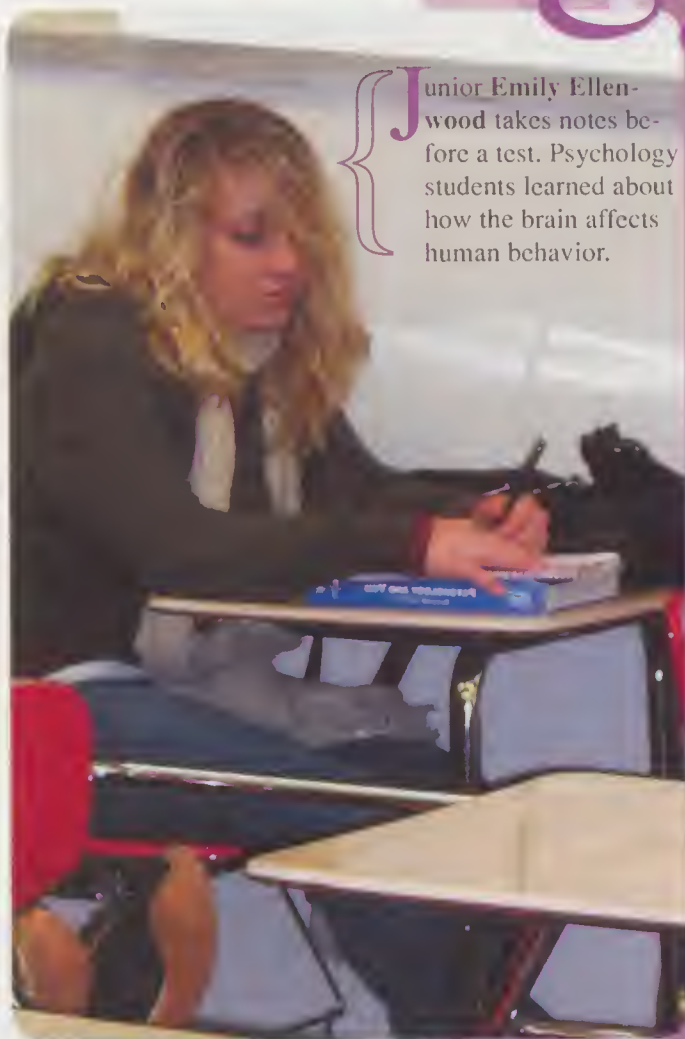

It seems that psychology is "very versatile," according to Her, "explains how we work and others work."

Being on the newspaper staff is not easy. There are strict deadlines, photo assignments, design mock ups, and having to deal with a crazy journalism teacher, but that's what all the students on the Scroll staff have to deal with in order to deliver the paper each month.

"Newspaper sometimes can be really hard, but I have a lot of fun doing it," said junior Allie Ellis.

The members of the staff put in a lot of time and effort to produce a quality newspaper for the school. Staff members often have to put in many hours outside of their class period they have each day.

"One time I came in with a bunch of staff members after school and we ended up staying here until 6 working on our stories. It was fun though because we had pizza and sat around chatting while we worked," said junior Stephanie Ouverson.

The paper is filled with a variety of stories. It includes stories varying from East High news to worldly news, opinion stories that allow staff members to really express how they feel, fun feature stories that range from reviews to stories about how East might be haunted, and sports stories about all the teams at East.

"My favorite stories to write are sports stories because my life pretty much revolves around them and since there aren't that many boys on the staff, I usually get the chance to write a lot of sports stories," said junior Allen Van Gundy.

The goal of the staff this year was to come up with designs and stories that will interest and draw in the attention of more students than in the past years.

"We really want to broaden our readers. If we had it our way, everyone in the school would read the paper and love it, but we understand that it's not going to appeal to everyone, though we do our best to appeal to as many people as we can," said senior Ashley Yingst.

"BPA stands for Business Professionals of America and its purpose is to build leadership and prepare students for careers in business," said Mary Jane Kaldenberg, sponsor of the BPA organization.

All club meetings are held during classes and conducted by local officers. This year the students discussed current projects they were working on, competitions they were attending, and fundraisers.

The first function the members attended was the Fall Conference in October where state officers are elected for the year. In the past East has had three state officers elected but nobody ran for office this year.

At Christmas the students adopted a family. They went out and bought toys, clothes, and food for the needy children. All of the students were required to bring canned goods for this occasion.

"The students really felt good about doing something nice for the families," said Kaldenberg.

The next major conference the students went to was the State Leadership Conference. Each student competes three times and if anyone places they go to nationals in New York City in May. Susan Moreno placed eighth out of 60 contestants in the Keyboarding Production event.

"Every year students have competed at state and several have gone to nationals," said Kaldenberg.

Three students in the past have placed at nationals, including one student who came in second and missed first place by just one point.

Next year, 14 students will be in the club. "I hope someone will run for state office next year," said Kaldenberg. "Anyone who is elected gets a free trip to nationals."

The music begins to play and the singers' hearts start to pound, as they anxiously wait to sing the songs they worked on in class time and time again.

"As I step on the stage each time, I wonder how we are going to do," said junior Austin Locke. "But the majority of the concerts have a positive finish."

Concerts can take an emotional toll on singers, whether it's their first time performing or if they are experienced. This is typically called stage fright and the choir members experience nervousness and their hearts begin to race.

"Usually the first performance of the year is nerve wracking, but after that you just get excited and butterflies fill your stomach," said senior Katelyn Moses.

Sophomore Chris Williams is one of the many choir members that had the opportunity to sing at Merle Hay Mall with his class and other choir classes. These members performed and enjoyed the afternoon hanging out with friends.

"We went to mall during school and it was awesome," said Williams. "I had a lot of fun with my friends and the singing was great."

There have been numerous concerts held in the EHS auditorium. They tend to sing songs about things going on in the world at that time such as: seasons, holidays, love, peace, and many others.

"We had a concert that was held in December. We sang Christmas songs and songs about snow and winter," said junior Amanda Coleman.

As the choir finishes their last song and the music begins to come to an end, the members smile to the audience as the curtain closes. The audience claps and behind the scenes, the choir knows that their concert was a success.

Watch any Made episode on MTV, any high school mini-series, or any B-List horror movie and who always portrays the cheerleader? The blonde hair, blue eyed, spoiled brat. In the real world, though, that's not always the case.

Sophomore cheerleader Brittany Syvixay understands that there is a certain label that comes along with being a cheerleader. She feels that one of the biggest downfalls in being one is that people have "preconceived notions about the kind of person you are."

Syvixay, along with the rest of the 9 and 10 cheerleading squads, know what it's like to be labeled as the "cheerleader." Although they know they are being judged, they also show that the typical viewpoints aren't always true.

Many students think that cheerleaders are catty, rude and stuck up. Freshman cheerleader Madison Kasper admits that there is drama between the girls, much like any other group of people, but you can always separate yourself from it.

"I try to stay away from the drama, it's one of the downfalls of being a cheerleader," said Kasper.

Sophomore Lacey Woltz thinks that cheerleaders get their reputation because of a few who may act a certain way, which leads to "assumptions that all cheerleaders are like that, which isn't true at all."

Along with the drama, students focus on the squad's appearance.

"When I think of cheerleaders," said senior Tyler Larson, "I think of skirts."

Being on the team, though, involves more than looking good and dressing cute. Their routines and stunts involve a lot of hard work and practice. Over the summer the girls attended a summer cheer camp to learn new techniques.

Coach Denise Rourke said that the girls embrace camp as a "learning experience" and even though the days are long and the mornings are early they "get more out of it than they may realize."

Sophomore Molly McCuddin said that she learned a lot from camp. "I got to be part of a stunt group with my friends and got to be the flyer, which was really fun."

Cheer camp also allowed the girls to get to know each other better. Many of the girls say they get along and are friends outside of cheerleading. They even get a chance to interact with older grades and make friends with the varsity squad.

"Sometimes it's intimidating working with varsity, but they're all pretty nice and we got along," said McCuddin.

"I like all of the varsity girls," said Woltz. "They're all really fun and I hang out with them sometimes."

The girls can prove themselves as more than just a stereotype with their talent, skills, and friendships on and off the cheerleading mat.

Cheerleaders are put into two categories: loved or hated.

"Everyone knows there are stereotypes and someone is going to put you into a category, but when the cheerleaders are always in front of people they are going to be criticized about something," said junior Stephanie Ouverson.

In the early days, squads mostly consisted of males, but today obviously things have changed, except for one small thing, junior and varsity cheerleader John Thompson.

"I have been coaching for over ten years and I always thought our stunts would be ten times better if we had more guys; John is definitely a big part of our squad," said cheerleading coach Denise Rourke.

Beyond cheering on the court and field or putting on a show during an assembly, the varsity squad also did many things in and around the community.

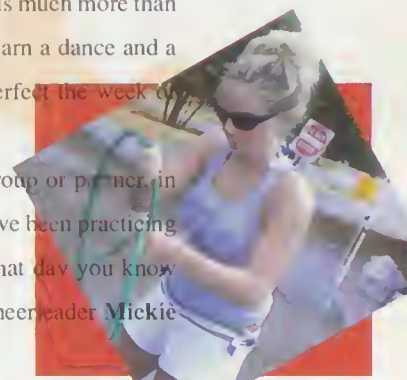

"This year we have passed out flyers, helped set up a Halloween party at Toyota of Des Moines and helped with the grand opening of a bank," said senior and varsity cheerleader Nicole Rayman.

Many may think the girls are just selected as part of the squad based on looks or social status, but for the girls it is much more than that. Try-outs begin in the spring and the girls learn a dance and a couple of cheers that they are to practice and perfect the week of try-outs.

"At the end of the week we go in with our group or partner, in front of about ten judges and perform what we have been practicing all week, then we are scored and usually later that day you know if you made it or not," said junior and varsity cheerleader Mickie Phengsiaroun.

"Cheerleading is my passion, I can't imagine doing anything else, or giving this up, and trust me it's not for the extra paycheck," said Rourke.

Freshman Devan Stuve nervously walks into the band room with sweaty palms and a confident attitude. She and five other girls wait to pick up a six foot pole and start to spin for their very first time.

This year was the 1st Winter Guard audition East has had that was successful. The current squad members were very happy with the so called "newbie's."

"I didn't think that spinning a flag would be so hard, but once I got the hang of it, it became easier," said freshman Marissa Kimmel-Kendrick. "I had witnessed the squad in action during marching band season, and wanted to give it a try."

With new inexperienced members, and State fast approaching, the Color Guard had a lot of work to do.

"Practice was very hard. When you got frustrated you couldn't give up," said junior Amanda Cox.

Long practices and extra hours of work finally paid off when the Guard took second place at the Iowa State Drill Team Association contest in December.

"I had been waiting for this," said senior captain Sydney Williams. "It finally felt like everything I had put into Guard had paid off. It was the perfect way to end my senior year on Winter Guard."

This year's theme was "Angels" and was in remembrance of the September 11, 2001 tragedy.

"A show full of such emotions can be tricky when performing it because some people might take the message in a different way than what we are trying to explain," said senior Trista Johnson.

This year the Guard opened the door for new opportunities for the team by hosting the 1st annual East Color Guard Invitational.

"It was very stressful to prepare for the teams to come in and be judged and perform, but once the judges and teams arrived and the decorations were up, it went great," said Stuve.

The winter guard and coaches celebrate their success after the awards ceremony at the ISDTA State competition. This year the squad not only improved their scores, but recieved 2nd place out of nine competing teams.

Does standing outside in the cold waiting to play a metal instrument with numb fingers sound like fun to you? To the members of the marching band this is an ordinary Friday night during football season.

Junior Amanda Bellis described, "Going to the games is one of the best parts. I like getting to know the other people and play fun and interesting music."

Hanging out with the rest of the band isn't the only part of marching band, however; it takes hard work to play, march, and move together for the games.

"Because there's so much you have to learn, we did two weeks marching band camp before school started to learn music and where we are supposed to go on the football field," said band director Chris Strohmaier.

Marching band may require a lot of work and skill, but Bellis says it is all worth it when the band achieves something they can be proud of.

"Sometimes it's hard to get everyone on the same page, but doing well at contests can give everyone a renewed interest and enthusiasm."

When the season ends for marching, the band is far from over. Concert band begins the day after the last football game.

Strohmaier described the concert band as more complex. "Because you're inside and not contending with outside elements or moving around, you can play more difficult music that you can't do outside."

Senior Trista Johnson furthers, "The music is more classical and emotional in concert and symphonic bands."

The members play in three concerts a year and participate in marching band contests throughout the season. The practice and the work before and after school lead up to these moments.

Johnson said, "You get kind of nervous, but you're excited to show people what you've been working so long on."

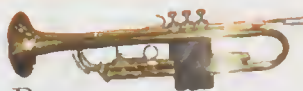

"We get our work done when we need to, but we have fun in the process," said Bellis.

As sophomore Andrea Campbell walked into handbells class, the only thing on her mind was what she would learn and all of the techniques that Traci McCaull would teach during class that day.

"It's so much fun seeing what all of the bells sound like," said Campbell. "We learn lots of ways to make the bells sound different."

With eleven students in advanced handbells and nine students in beginning bells, Campbell isn't the only one who enjoys playing the handbells.

"I'm in beginning handbells and I love it," said sophomore Brooke Wade.

In beginning bells, they learned all of the basics and the how to techniques. Advanced bells learn more advanced and harder songs. This gives something for the beginning bells students to look forward to for the next year.

"I hate it when people come up to me and say "what is the point of handbells?" All you do is ring a bell," said Campbell.

"It's harder than people think."

During Spring Break, some of the members went to Florida to play with the choir. They also traveled around town to show people their talent, and what the EHS handbell squad was really made of. During concerts the bells play with the choir, but they also play a little something by themselves too.

"Our busiest time of the year is Christmas," said sophomore Kristina Denin. "I love playing all the Christmas songs; they're always the most fun."

As the size of the bells get bigger the deeper the sound goes. The smaller the bells are the higher the sound.

"The bells are all the same," said Wade. "The varied sizes make the sounds different."

As Campbell and all her classmates walk out of bells class, all they can think about is how much they learned and what they need to improve individually and as a team. They also leave thinking about how much fun they had, and are looking forward to class tomorrow.

When anyone thinks of high school band, a vision of rows of talented musicians in pressed uniforms executing precise and clean-cut formations comes to mind. But band at East is more than that. There are many other opportunities for members of the band to get involved, one of them being the East High Jazz Band.

The Jazz Band is different from the Marching Band in many ways, they don't march and they play more flowing and light music. The Jazz Band is also a lot smaller than the marching band because people have to try out to get into it.

This year the band worked a Latin flair to their show and it included the songs: "Pump It Up," "When I'm 64," and "Bistro Latino."

Period 7 was available for students that were free, to have the chance to practice during class. The Jazz Band made these songs sound their best by meeting almost every morning at 7 a.m. to practice their show.

Jazz Band can open many collegiate opportunities to the seniors involved. Drake University works closely with many of high school bands in Iowa, and an honor band and wind symphony were created for a workshop and show on December 1-2.

Students who were accepted into this band worked with and competed against students from other schools to create a band ready to perform in only a few days.

Jazz Band is a program at East that combines talent with a passion for music and it also offers an alternative to the sharp and precise marching band style.

“The music in Jazz Band is more fun than marching and concert music. Also, we get to travel to a lot of contests which is fun because we have a lot of down time to hang out

Many high school students would agree that it can be a challenge finding enough time to get things done with such busy schedules. For students in National Honor Society (NHS), and those on the National Council for Youth Leadership (NCYL), volunteering and being good citizens fits easily into their daily lives.

Senior Shikha Parsai participates in NHS and believes it improves her leadership skills and gives her assurance.

"Being involved in NHS was important to me because being a part of it made me feel like a leader at school which gave me confidence. Basically, if I had the qualifications to get into NHS, it made me feel like I can do pretty much anything that requires leadership and being involved," said Parsai.

Senior Ashley Yingst enjoyed volunteering because of the gratification it brought.

"I think it's important to be involved in the community because it gives you a perspective on things that you may not have known about before, and it benefits both myself and others," she said.

One junior said that the students who volunteer in NHS prove that high-schoolers care about their community.

"I enjoy being in NHS because it gives me time to give back to the community. It continues to prove that high-schoolers do care about their education and they truly want to help others," said junior Christine Hcr.

NCYL is composed of about 200 seniors from Des Moines area high schools. They're selected for the council based on grades, involvement, and good character. There were about 20 seniors selected from East and they attended a two day conference at Drake University focused on leadership.

"It was nice to be chosen as a part of NCYL. It felt good to know that all of your hard work and leadership was actually being recognized," said senior Amy Tarr.

Amanda Eimers is an adviser with NHS and talked about the importance of the organization across the country and here at East.

"With chapters all across the United States, NHS recognizes academic achievement and is committed to fostering leadership, character, and service among its members. NHS students at East contribute many hours of service to the school and community each year in a variety of ways," said Eimers.

For all the students involved, the organizations are meaningful and important to them in their own ways.

"NHS gives me a new perspective on many things. It's like the saying when Christmas comes around, the point is to 'give and offer', not to 'take and receive.' It's like the Christmas season, but all year round," said junior Naly Bounyalath.

Seniors Hoang Nguyen, Robert Frye, Abby Grover, and Larry Davis have been playing with the orchestra together ever since their middle school days back at Hiatt. The group celebrated at a concert in May held for the seniors and also went out to dinner with their teacher of 7 years, Jennifer Luft.

Jennifer Luft conducts the group during selections from the Nutcracker. The group played three songs and then joined with the band for the finale called "Acclimation."

Stress isn't uncommon in freshman Seth Hinshaw's life. With homework, tests and all of the drama that comes along with high school, it's a bit tough. But luckily he has an escape from all of his problems every day during 6th period. That escape is orchestra.

"Orchestra has been a great experience for me. It's a great way to relax and I've been playing since fourth grade," said Hinshaw.

Orchestra can also be rewarding to students who may struggle at first with songs that have a higher level of difficulty.

"I love it when I get a song right because then I know I've accomplished something. You get mad at first when you can't get it, but knowing I'll eventually get it right keeps me going," said freshman Ryan Beggs.

For many students, orchestra is a social opportunity as well.

"The class is fun and challenging and it's cool to be able to talk to friends while learning at the same time. We also go on fun trips, so that's great, too," said sophomore Shawna Wilson.

According to instructor Jennifer Luft, the group had an exciting event this year when a Drake professor was commissioned to create a piece exclusively for the band and orchestra. The piece was called "Acclimation" and it was very unique, yet it presented the group with some difficulties because it was such an advanced song.

Junior Pa Vang offered this advice to her peers, "Go for it, keep trying your best and after awhile you'll start to like it. In the end, it all comes together."

The concert turned out to be a success and in the end, the advice of a student rang true; it all came together.

your school spirit.

Story/Layout by Ashley Kasper

Spirit! Spirit! Let's hear it! School spirit can be shown in many ways. The easiest way to show your East High pride is by wearing EHS apparel. But where are you going to find all those items? Well, they all came from one place, the Pep 'E' Club.

Pep Club is an organization that promotes school spirit and tries "to get people involved in our school," said senior and co-pres. Addison Speck.

They also planned the infamous winter dance.

"The dance was definitely a good one thanks to us seniors," said senior Shane Kellow. "We made the most of it, of course, because it was our last one and everything."

This year's theme for the dance was "Mardi Gras Madness." Giant masquerade masks hung from the ceilings, paintings of Bourbon Street in New Orleans hung along the hallways, and, of course, beads were everywhere.

"We had such a versatile theme this year," said junior Nuong Nguyen. "It let us do a lot of cool and different things for the dance."

Pep Club sold many of the spirit items found around the school such as tattoos, pins, buttons, pom-poms, spirit beads, and even megaphones.

"We thought the megaphones were such a cool idea, but it turns out people aren't allowed to use them at games, which is stupid," said senior and VP Trevor Beals.

Pep Club also decorated from the homecoming assembly. They sold spirit strips that were divided up by grade levels. The object was to be the class with the most strips, hence, the most school spirit. The big competition this year was between the freshmen and the seniors; in the end, the seniors won.

"People always seem to enjoy the spirit strips and since they are only $0.10 a piece, people tend to buy more," said Speck.

Don't think that you have to be an upperclassman to join this group; anyone can join.

"In the fall we go talk to all the freshmen to try and get them involved," said sponsor Robbie Malm.

Pep club has been around, believe it or not, since the 1950's! It actually started out as two different groups; the Girl's club and the Pep club. They merged in the 80's to form the Pep 'E' club.

Above: seniors Aaron Deloe, Addison Speck, and Taylor Miller listen in on last minute details during a meeting to prepare for the winter dance. The dance, "Mardi Gras Madness," was held February 3, 2007. Below: members discuss the plans for decorating before the dance.

"Most people think that it's just an after-school science program for those nerdy kids with taped together glasses, but they're wrong," said senior Joe Rivas. "None of us even wear glasses."

Rivas is just one of the many minority students that was selected to participate in the government funded program Science Bound, a scholarship opportunity through Iowa State University.

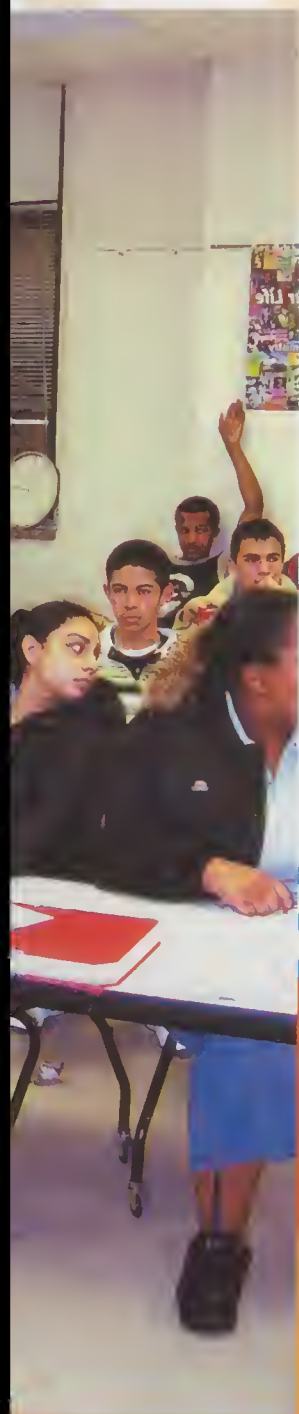

"Sometimes it was hard, we had to keep our grades at a 3.0 just to stay in," said junior Jared Weatherall, "but it was a good preparation for college."

Science Bound met after school one night a week during the year to complete different activities, improve their production in school, look into science and math careers, and to take field trips to local colleges, like ISU.

"The kids worked really hard at the concession stands and with raising extra money for our field trip to Chicago that we take every other year," said Science Bound coordinator Annette Bierkamp. "We visited a lot of the museums, the zoo, and the aquarium."

The group has also done other activities this year including the volcano-like Coke and Mentos experiment, visited the Mercy Hospital laboratory, had a meeting with a medical technologist, discovered the number of calories in different kinds of foods, created a periodic table using paint chips, and had an overnight retreat at the Madrid 4H Center with many of the other surrounding high schools.

"It's just a great opportunity for kids to do well in school, work towards college and a career, and also have fun doing it," said Bierkamp.

To some, choir may be a distant middle or even elementary school memory. The memory of a class that performs the annual holiday assembly returns full-force. But for two groups of students, the Scarlet Singers and Fresh Air, it has become much more.

The Scarlet Singers, or show choir, learn to work together while coordinating singing with a dance routine.

The group met with a professional choreographer a few times a week to practice their routine.

"The number of boys in the program has increased dramatically in contrast to previous years and the students work well together," said sponsor Traci McCaull. "But the main challenge is getting students to class on time and consistently to practice."

In previous years, the Scarlet Singers have performed at Merle Hay Mall during the holidays.

This year they continued that tradition along with evening shows.

"I like being able to perform and show off what we've practiced," said senior Tierra Ellis.

They also gave performances at a few Des Moines middle schools.

The Singers aren't the only show choir at East. Fresh Air, a group compiled of freshman interested in pursuing a place in the Scarlet Singers, prepares for shows just like the Singers.

Fresh Air practiced separately and they performed a different routine than the Scarlet Singers. Fresh Air performed with the Singers at Merle Hay Mall and the evening concerts.

After a year of preparation, the members of Fresh Air hoped to move up and join the Scarlet Singers and continue the well-earned tradition.

Senior Traci McCaull is the sponsor of the show choir. She is a vocal coach and has been a part of the choir since she was a freshman. Olson is one of the freshmen who has been in the choir since she was a freshman.

Junior Rachael Schwartztrauber didn't like the fact that she had to wake up at five in the morning to make her Steppers practice where for hours Schwartztrauber and the rest of the dance team would work on making sure their moves were in syne for their next performance.

"We practice all the time. We actually practiced all summer long about three days a week for three hours. Then once school started we practiced Tuesdays after school for two hours, and then Wednesday and Friday mornings before school from 6-7:15 a.m. When we wanted to prepare ourselves for state we even practiced on all the Sundays of that month," said Schwartztrauber.

All the numerous hours and sweat put into preparing the team's routine paid off when the team danced at the state tournament held at Vets Auditorium located minutes away from the school.

“It was a huge accomplishment when we received a division one rating on ‘Higher Ground,’ our jazz dance at state. As a team we just put so much time and effort into coordinating the routine and making sure the moves and music were just right, so after all that work it was nice to feel that our work paid off," said sophomore Katelynn Tappan.

The Steppers dance team has changed in a couple of ways from the dance team last year. This year, the team danced to more hip-hop songs and inserted that hip-hop taste into their dance moves. This new sense of dance may come from the fact that this year the dance team had a new coach, Charlotte O'Hern, who owns a local dance studio.

“She is just amazing and since she is a dance teacher she shares the same love of dance as we do and she isn’t afraid to tell us what looks right and what looks just ridiculous. It also is a huge help that sometimes she let the team practice at her dance studio because we got to use the mirrors to try and help us with the expressions we made while we danced,” said junior Chantelle Moody.

"I loved working with all the girls and was so impressed with their dedication. I am really excited for what we can accomplish next year," said O'Hern.

"For graduation, the senior class will be wearing red and white robes," said senior board president Kathleen McCuddin.

Teachers and principals aren't the only ones that have a say in the final decisions of what goes on at East. McCuddin was one of the many student leaders that took charge and made tough choices. Organizations like senior board and student government make this possible.

"As a senior board officer, we have to speak for and represent the senior class," said senior board treasurer Jiear Vang. "We want to make everyone happy, but we have to take the initiative to make a good decision that will be the best for all the seniors."

There are a total of ten committees that make up senior board. Members signed up for the committees and they tried to plan, execute, and perform the specific tasks. For instance, alumni banquet, senior shirts, senior/faculty challenge, or graduation.

Senior Daric Williams said, "I'm one of the chairmen for post prom and it puts some pressure on me because it wouldn't feel too great if post prom was a failure."

One thing that senior board has in common with student government besides student democracy, would be giving back to the community. Senior board has a group, the "Senior Project," that focuses on cleaning up the school for a whole day. Student government devotes their time to charitable events, such as the food drive and the blood drive.

"It feels ecstatic and delightful to be giving back to the community," said junior Naly Bounyalath. "Even though I'm just one person, I'm still helping and it counts."

Student government was in charge of one of the main events that happened toward the beginning of the year: Homecoming. The theme was "Party in the Pyramid," and the colors were teal, purple and gold.

Senior Samantha Cam said, "Homecoming was very different this year, but that's a good thing. One thing that made it successful was that we had a variety of music."

some rewards in a leadership role are being able to have a say in what happens to the East community and helping to make it so much better.

Batter up

Story/Layout by: Masyn Sayre

At every baseball game the Scarlets planned on going out on the field to hit, run and support their team, but when their hopes turned to tragedy everyone was left stunned.

During the game against Ottumwa, East was down a run when sophomore Dusty Medearis stepped up to bat. Keeping his eye on the ball, Medearis faked a bunt, but what happened next was something no one saw coming or could ever brace themselves for. With the ball racing towards him, Medearis had little time to think and instead of the ball hitting the bat it came right for him, hitting his heart.

"When the ambulance came I was defibrillated four times and I spent 36 hours in the hospital," said Medearis. "I did recover and ended up practicing and playing for the last two weeks of the season."

Considering this setback for the freshman Scarlets, the team did very well, even though more than half of the players were still in middle school.

"They were a young team, they improved a great deal and we finished 20-15-1," said freshman coach Carl Drautz. "They did a great job."

The sophomores also did a great job this year.

In the eighth inning against Ankeny, the Scarlets had two outs and the bases loaded, Junior Jordan Gillaspy stepped up to the plate, took a deep breath and swung, hitting a double off the fence and winning the game.

"It was exciting and it felt good to be able to win the game for the team," said Gillasp.

Junior Scott Jensen was also an outstanding player this year; with the title of being the number three hitter and catcher all year long, he had a lot to be proud of.

"We had high expectations for this year, sticking together will definitely help us the next two years," said Jensen.

The team almost accomplished their goal this year of being undefeated. Winning all but one game the team set a new record of having the highest percent out of any sophomore team in East High history.

"This year was a team effort, from the first inning to the last of each double header and everyone that stepped on the field for us was a great asset," said Coach Marty Luft.

It felt good to win the game for the team.

Hard work beats talent when talent doesn't work hard. But you know your Scarlets; they're hard workers.

"We had our goals set and we worked hard, and in the end it paid off," said varsity coach Brian Luft.

And indeed they did, the varsity baseball team had a win-loss record of 29-14, putting themselves in the record book for 'most wins by team' in East High history.

"It was great to achieve the school record for most wins," said alumni Matt Grochala. "The team can literally say they were the best in school history."

Alumni Tyler Luft broke three records this year including most hits, most doubles, and most runs batted in. Alumni Nick Eaton also broke three records including most homeruns, most runs scored, and most walks.

This year focused more on improving hitting, but also covered the basics, such as ground balls and situations. Such situations include working on strategies; like what to do when there are people on both second and third base.

"We lost a lot of our hitters this year, and as a result, lost some of our games due to bad hits," said Luft, "so we really tried to concentrate on that."

"We always waited for hitting to come up in practice, we had competitions against each other when we hit; it was a lot of fun," said senior

Josh Myers.

One of the team's disappointments, though by a very close game, was the championship game that would've taken the team to state. It was the sixth inning in the game against Urbandale, tied at 6-6, with the bases loaded, Urbandale hit a grand slam that knocked East's chances out of the ballpark. The game ended 6-10.

"The game was a real nail biter," said Grochala.

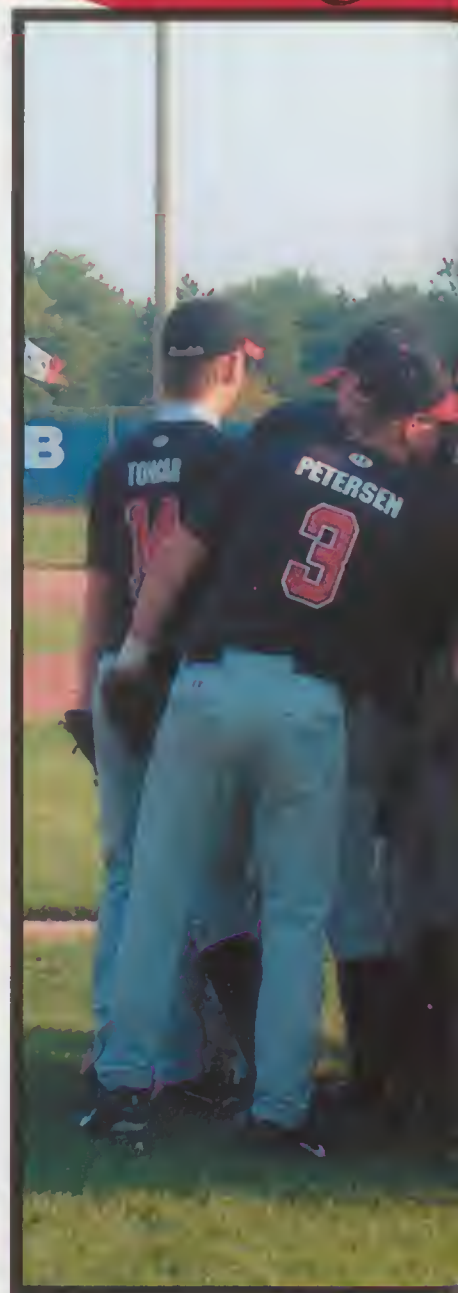

"We played well, they just played a little better," said Myers.

What is ironic though, is that East beat the state champions in a previous game during the season.

"And very soundly if I do say so myself," said Myers. East beat Valley 9-2.

New goals are already set for the players that will continue next season, and their hopes are higher than ever.

"We had a pretty good year, but we lost some games we shouldn't have and we're good enough to have gone further than we did," said junior Sean Logan. "We will be even better next year."

Players huddle each other as they are introduced before a game.

Pulling thru

Story/Layout by: Ashley Lovell & Jay Villalobos

The sophomore boys basketball had it tough this year with the rough season, but with high heads and positive attitudes, they pulled through.

"I have worked with so many kids and these guys were the best. I couldn't have asked for a better group of kids," said Coach Chad Street.

Street had the team preparing for JV and varsity, and even possibly college ball.

"I want to play next year and the years to come I think I'm really good and can go somewhere with it," said Jordan Owen.

With the sophomores practicing with the varsity, the players got to know what they have to look forward to in the next few years. Sophomore Eric Feldman was already playing for varsity so he was ready to go and ended up playing for all three teams (sophomore, JV, and varsity) which helped his game.

"I like playing for the teams I think I help out more that way," said Feldman.

"Practicing with the varsity isn't hard, but it's different since it's not just our team," said Kian Wiand. Some of these players have played in the past and think they have the skill to go on. Some of the players that played last year didn't go out for the team this year, so they had some new comers.

"About three or four of the players from the freshman team last year decided they didn't want to be on the team this year," said Street.

The sophomore team had a unique touch this season because they had two freshmen on their team and they both worked well with the other players. "I like being on the sophomore team. It made me feel that I was good enough for their team. I think that we helped a lot," said freshman player Tyler Jensen.

Before every game the team would always have their pre-game talk which helped the team get focused and ready to go. The team had a special sign they all like to hit as they went out of the locker room for good luck.

Hitting the sign was part of our team we hit before the game and sometimes after so we do well on the next game. For away games we took the sign with us we believe it will bring us good luck for games and practices," said Wiand.

"The season has been tough but they made it through with strong faces," said Street.

really enjoyed

I on the team this year, because we got to practice with the varsity and that helped me become a better player.

What makes a great team? Self discipline, teamwork, lack of attitude? Those are a few among the many fundamentals of a great basketball team.

"Teamwork is probably the most important part of a good team," said freshman/ sophomore basketball player TJ James. "You should also have self discipline and a good attitude towards the game."

Since the beginning of November, the freshmen trained long and hard, preparing for the new basketball season to arrive. Between running suicides and going through dribbling drills, the team has it hard both on and off the court.

"We went through four drills each day during practice," said freshman coach Carl Drautz. "We went through fundamentals, scrimmage, then fundamentals again, and then go home."

Though it always seems better to take the easy way, hard work does pay off. Take James for instance. He started out as a freshman, and at the beginning of the season, proving himself worthy on the sophomore team.

"Basketball isn't all about talent," said James. "You have to have the entire team working together to do well on the court."

The team played twenty different games over the course of the season. Out of the twenty, they have won four. Even though they didn't have that great of a season, freshman player Kyle Cox kept his head high, saying that they've improved a lot since the beginning of the season.

"We've really progressed since the beginning of the season," said Cox. "Honestly, we started out with no discipline and had a little bit of an attitude problem."

The team did a great job this year, and after working in the off season, they'll be ready for new challenges.

"All we can do is work hard," said Cox.

Nets swishing, buzzers buzzing, shoes squeaking, coaches yelling offensive and defensive plays, and crowds going wild after a three-pointer is made are all sounds you hear at a varsity basketball game.

The team has endured many challenges this season such as losing seven seniors, learning how to get their heads in the game, and maturing as a team.

"It's been a process," said head coach Andy Howard, "We're still recuperating after the loss of our seniors from last season and with a new team, you have to rebuild from the ground up."

With an 8-15 record, the Scarlets proceeded on to the sub-state semi finals after pulling off a win against Hoover then falling to Valley 84-71.

Senior Jake Zimmerman is the only player from the starting five to return this season along with seniors Brandon Brown and captain Ryan Brouwer.

"There wasn't too much pressure leading the team," said Brouwer. "All we really needed was maturity but we were all kept in line pretty well."

With the senior loss, new players had the opportunity to show their true colors, such as sophomores Tyler Stumme and Eric Feldmann.

The guys know that to develop a strong team, they need to build their maturity and most of all, a strong friendship.

"This summer, we went to basketball camp in Indianola and a lot of the players didn't get along with each other and there were constant fights, and now we're all one big family," said junior Brett Kelsey.

Staying positive was a vital part in keeping the teams hopes alive,

"Coach taught us not to look at scores during game," said junior Joe Jackson. "It doesn't matter if we're winning or losing; all that matters is keeping your head up and staying positive."

Through all the hardships they've experienced, the most important thing that the guys will take with them is the memories.

"My favorite memory this season is when we beat #7 Ankeny," says Kelsey. "During that game, we really showed everyone who were and we became one as a team."

The seniors' of 07 leave behind thier legacy as well as their wisdom as they completed their season in the substate semi finals.

"My advice for returning and new players is to always give it 100 percent," said Brouwer. "It doesn't matter if you're good or not, just give it your all."

The team sits on the bench anxiously waiting for their turn to go in.

Senior Jake Zimmermann runs down the court past the junior Glen Welch as they try to set up a play to "take it to the gold."

Sophomore Tyler Sturges attempts to escape three defenders. Sturges was the only starting underclassman and one of two sophomores on the varsity team.

Junior Allen Van Gundy shoots over the head of a defender, the Husky. Van Gundy averaged 15.5 points a game.

The players gather on their turf as they attempt to take over the upcoming timeout. It is one of the most intense moments of the game.

The players' eyes wander as they all get ready to fight for a rebound and score.

Sophomore Eric Feldmann gets ready to receive the ball from the ref and pass.

A time out is a serious time in the eyes of the varsity team. They huddle together to figure out a way to stop the other team from scoring, or strategy to continue their streak of success. It is also a huge time for encouragement and re-focusing.

Season rebound

The girls JV basketball team started off slow, but ended the season winning twelve games and only losing nine.

"The beginning of the season, we didn't do so well because I had to get to know the girls. The girls also had to get to know me and their teammates, but the second part of the season we started winning more," said Coach Donovan Filkins.

For Filkins, this was very different for him since he has never coached at East before this season.

"It was a whole new year for me coaching with girls when I have been working with boys. I had to learn how to work with the girls and also learn about their emotions," said Filkins.

On the court the girls were good at playing well together.

"Towards the end of the season all of us knew each other's strengths and weaknesses, so we played great defense," said sophomore Brianna Robinson.

The girls were really supportive of each other both on and off of the court.

"We all got along well and we always cheered each other on the court," said sophomore Tineesha Gibson.

The team said that their best game was playing Roosevelt at their high school for their first time of the season.

"We beat Roosevelt by 13 points and it was pretty satisfying," said Filkins.

The girls had a lot of fun playing and made a lot of fun memories together as well.

"The time we spent together was always fun, and we all had fun when our coach invited us all over for dinner," said Robinson.

The change really began in 1990, when we decided it takes an hour to make a good product. It's not a goal, it's a reality.

"I really enjoyed playing through it," he said Kelsey Summy.

A lot of people were very happy how this team came together and worked hard throughout the whole year.

"I am really proud of the girls and their efforts to get better. They were good kids on and off the floor," said Heller. "I hope they keep working to reach their goals because they have a lot of potential."

Hops there

Story/layout by Danielle Oliver

Every year around December, the crowds storm the bleachers and concessions watching the girls' varsity team play. Parents, teachers, students, and family all gather for the event cheering on the Scarlets.

East has participated in girls basketball since about the 1960's and has been ranked in the top 15 almost every year.

"I think that participating on the varsity basketball team is fun and on top of that we work hard to do what we do, we may be losing seniors, but all of the rest of us are going to work hard to make up that loss," said sophomore Kalynn Fields.

Try outs started in November and the girls went all the way to State.

"They played hard and earned the right to go all the way to state," said alum Tiara Roubok.

"I believe that the girls worked harder than we did when we played," said Roubok, "The right to go to state is a privilege and honor and I think that the girls earned their right."

This active sport brings up many spectators.

The last varsity, non-regional home game, had an attendance of at least 100 people, according to Science Bound ticket sales.

"We get a lot of support from the school and it helps us when we play, a game to see all those people here to see us win," said junior Kayla Koeppen.

The 2006-2007 season has been a great year for the girls and they passed the semi-finals and headed to state to play Valley.

When the girls made state and played, they fell short, nine points the loss was disappointing but all that tells the players is that the harder they work the farther they go.

"I believe that the girls' worked harder than we did when we played," said Roubok, "the right to go to state is a privilege, and honor and I think that the girls have earned their right."

The girls varsity team was featured in the Des Moines Register over six times during the season, for their big wins, their talent, and their coach Sam Powell.

"Pick up those spares," says coach Doug Davis to his team at most of the bowling meets or practices.

This year the team had a lot of close meets that could have gone either way. The new assistant coach Johnny Carr was very pleased with the teams' performances.

"With some practice over the summer months the team will be even better next year," said Carr.

Over 40 boys and 17 girls tried out this year, the most they have ever had.

"I kept fifteen boys and fifteen girls this year," said Coach Davis. "There seems to be a growing interest in the sport and I hope someday high schools will sanction the sport of bowling."

Bowling a game of 265 and a series of 610, senior Jennifer Davison set an East record.

According to most of her teammates, Davison is one of their top players. They all thought she was fun to watch and was always giving the other players tips.

The boys' varsity bowled a game of 2991 at the tri-meet at Air Lanes against Hoover and Ottumwa. The team averaged 199, the highest all time team score for coach Davis.

"I think we did our best at the tri-meet.

Overall our season went well, we could have done better though," said senior Jon Bixler.

With a loss of four seniors, this year's boys varsity players were younger.

"The biggest change would have had to be losing our seniors," said junior David Sappenfeld. "It gave some of the younger players a chance to be on varsity though."

As far as practice went, it was all about bowling and having a good time.

Junior Jessica Smith said, "Practice was always so much fun. It was like bowling with my buddies since some of my friends were also on the team."

Almost every Tuesday and Thursday the team would get together to practice at one of the bowling alleys in Des Moines. They would usually practice where their next meet was located.

"I liked how we would practice at the alley we would be bowling our next meet at," said junior Brittany Grochala. "It let us get a feel for the lanes."

The kids enjoyed the year and most of them said they are most likely to try out for bowling next year, according to Coach Davis.

"The season was pretty fun," said junior Jake Belcher. "Coach Davis inspired us to achieve our goals and we all worked as hard as possible to impress him."

At the end of the race people cheer for everyone as they finish. Far above, senior Nick Newcomb is exhausted after running his three miles for the meet.

Just for fun

Story/Layout by Emma Diver

JOS country members run as individuals all aiming for their best time. Each person's time decides if they will be JV or varsity in every meet they run.

Lisa Collogan goes to cross country practice every day, from 7:30 a.m. to school, and then goes to cross country practice after school, where the team runs three miles.

Coach Keri Frommelt said she wants to teach people how to love running. "I hope I can get them to love running for the rest of their lives, it's something that they can always do—there won't always be a football team to join, but anyone can run."

For Collogan and the other members of the cross country team, running is more than a punishment. Their sport, cross country, is entirely based around running.

Junior Naly Bounyalath described, "I like running because I love the feeling of finishing a long run, knowing I pushed my hardest; it takes the stress off."

Frommelt said that people run for a number of reasons, some because they are dedicated, some to stay in shape, but all are welcome in cross country—where competitors run for fun. Sarah Town said, "I try to push myself to the limit, even if I don't finish, I know I'm going to be a better runner than I was before."

"I love the feeling of finishing a long run knowing I pushed my hardest."

—Naly Bounyalath

Running for the fun of it is something you can do a lot of practice beforehand, but it's knowing at the point where a good speed can be maintained for the whole distance. This means that cross country practice is intense.

Frommelt said that they vary their workouts, "We try to do hills, speed work, and distance run within a week to ten days."

This hard work leads to the players like Lisa Collogan who practice to the extreme, but also run for the fun of the sport.

"Finishing my race and just being with the people that are in it are the best parts," said Bounyalath, "They make it fun."

All in the family

Story/Layout by: Ashley Kasper

When most people leave their homes, they are leaving their family, but that is not the case for East High football players. They have another family waiting for them out on the field.

"We have really become a football family," said freshman football coach Ken Burgess.

New to the East family were the freshman, who worked together every day to improve as a team, to gain each others trust and respect, on and off the field.

"We have kids from four or five different middle schools coming together to make a team," said Burgess. "It takes time for everyone to trust each other."

Joining and sticking with a sport that has over 50 practices throughout only a couple months can be hard to commit to. The freshmen started their season with 60 players and ended with 55. Now that's a commitment.

"Everyone always tried to stay positive," said freshman Eric Dungan Jr. "The coaches also made sure everyone got a chance to play."

Sophomore Brad Davison said, "We found out who was dedicated to the team, we overcame many battles, and bound together to form a brotherhood."

Practices were held everyday after school until 6:30. A normal practice included tackling drills, offensive and defensive individual practices, special teams practice and conditioning.

"The sophomore team showed a steady improvement throughout the season," said sophomore coach Phil Hornback. "They found that by playing together and supporting each other they could become better as a team."

All agree that the teams have become "better in every area," meaning offense, defense, and special teams.

"Our goals at the ninth grade level were to improve individually and as a team every week, and we did that," said Burgess.

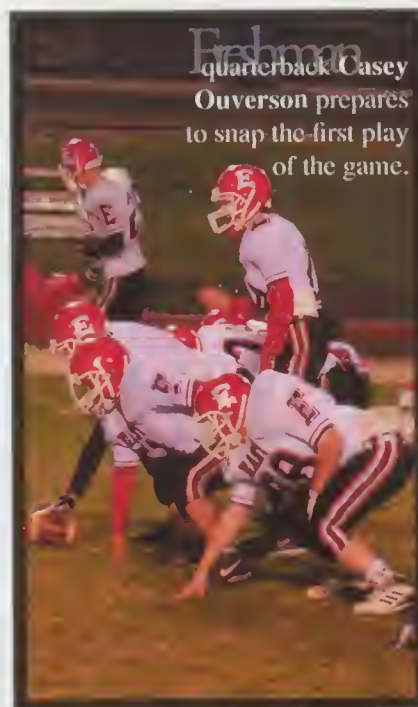

"I think everyone has gotten more physical this year," said sophomore Brad Underwood.

"They really grew up right before me and the other coaches' eyes this year," said Hornback. "They have a great future in store for them."

"I think we will really be something to watch next year," said Davison.

Turf is greener

After ending last season with an overall record of 3-6, the football team knew that they had to make some big changes and start the new season off with a bang.

And start the season with a bang they did, shutting out season opener Waukee 14-0, and continuing undefeated for three games.

"This was a good game to start the season with, since it showed all the fans that we have improved since last year," said junior tight end Scott Jensen.

The Scarlets went on to finish the season with a record of 5-4, their first winning season in two years.

"This season showed a lot of people that they can still believe in us," said junior kicker Austin Elder.

This year East had the chance to advance to the state playoffs for the first time since being instructed by their new head coach Rick Roberts, but the chance was lost when they fell to then no.7-ranked Newton, 10-7.

"That was a huge game for us and I thought that we could've pulled it off," said Roberts. "We played a great game, though, I couldn't have asked for more effort out of the players."

But a winning season wasn't just given to the Scarlets, the players put in a lot of hard work during the off season, spending countless hours in the school weight room, going to football camps, and having two-a-day practices in the blistering heat and pouring rain.

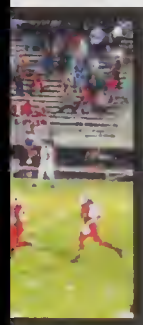

"If this season taught me anything, it taught me to care about the person next to you more than you do yourself, because without him, you can accomplish nothing," said senior quarterback Brett Toncar.

On the green

Story/Layout by: Jami Bowen

The sky is blue and filled with millions of white giant clouds. The team steps out onto the perfect fresh cut green grass and they take a deep breath of the crisp air and look out over the green at all the holes, and they sigh with the thought, "What a perfect day to play a game of golf."

Students on the golf team feel like that before taking that first drive with the ball.

There are two different golf teams throughout the year. One team is for boys and it takes place during the beginning of the year and ends in the fall. The other is the girls' team which takes place during the spring. Even though the two teams' seasons aren't at the same time, both teams, along with their coaches have one goal; to lower each players score.

"I encourage the girls on my team to really try to improve. I like to make things interesting. During practice we will go out and play a round of golf and at the end, I'll pay the girl with the lowest score a dollar. I mean anything is worth it because I just love seeing improvement," said the girls' coach Lowell Long.

Golf doesn't seem to draw a whole lot of attention so the teams tend to be very small, but a closely knit group.

"We didn't have enough girls interested at East to make a team so we combined with North which actually turned out to be an advantage. The North girls brought us closer together and everyone just pretty much got along," said junior Samantha Smith.

Golf is not a contact sport. Players don't get bruises and the only pain that comes with the game is maybe sore feet from all the walking but that doesn't mean the game isn't hard.

"Golf is all mental. You have to look at your stroke, your swing, and really think and concentrate on the things you need to improve on. Your mind and body are going to want to do the swing the way you're used to, and you have to go against that and really force on trying to be better," said sophomore Charles Hughes.

How would you like spending hours after school doing brutal drills that focus on enhancing your ability and alertness everyday after school? Well that's what the boys' soccer team does every practice to improve their team.

"We do a lot of scrimmaging during practice but the things that really help us improve as a team are the foot-skill and awareness drills. They are very important because we need to know how to control the ball and it helps us be alert of the people surrounding us during an intense game," said junior Aaron Degeoey.

Last year the team started off young with very little experience. Even though things started out rough, by the end of the season the team developed into a fierce competitor that some schools were frightened to play against.

"I loved watching the team develop. I was very proud of the players for stepping up and showing leadership skills towards the end. It truly made the difference from the beginning of the season to the strong end we finished with," said Head Coach Derek Lounsberry.

Players as well as coaches have their expectations set high for this next season. Goals have been established to become a more intense team starting at the beginning to the end, making this coming season more impressive than the last.

"I want our team to be undefeated and at least make it to the finals, but it would be really cool if we could make it to state," said senior Derek Hale.

Soccer recap

Story/Layout by Emma Diver

"I enjoyed the group of girls who play soccer, the different grades were mixed together, and I got to be friends with seniors even though I was a sophomore," said junior Sarah Lown.

There were 4 home school students, 5 sophomores, 8 juniors, and 5 seniors on the girls' varsity team alone. This wide combination of students lent a different aspect to girl's soccer in 2006.

Varsity Coach Christian Ezell said this was something new for him, "From my perspective, I thought the team mixed very well. However, I have wondered how our chemistry might have been if everyone took their classes at East."

Besides meeting new people, players worked hard to perform their best and get in shape during the season. Pre-season warm-ups and running around the building helped students during the season.

"I find conditioning fun; it's a lot easier to get going during the season if we practice beforehand. We got to meet new people in 'open gym' and have fun playing the game," said Lown.

For many of the freshmen, this was the first time they learned about the work that goes into a season before the games. Practice started in February for a season in March.

"Conditioning beforehand was weird," said sophomore Hannah McKeever. "We ran up and down four flights of stairs, it was really hard."

One way the hard work paid off was in improvement.

"I think we got better, for one thing we learned how to play with each other and how each person competed, and learned how to make each other better," said Lown.

The team seems to have been learning on and off the soccer field, with many students taking their classes seriously as well.

Ezell said, "The group of girls didn't confuse their priorities where sport and school are concerned. Our average team GPA was 3.4, I was proud to be the coach of such a smart responsible group. We worked hard, we laughed a lot, and we had fun playing soccer."

"I was proud of the girls I got to coach. I'll miss them."

-Coach Ezell

"Every time I went away I was deceiving my mom. I'd tell her I was going to school but I'd be out on the street playing. I always had a ball on my feet."

A Successful transition

06-07 season, the JV team was successful, winning Maribeth Sellers' conference with a record of 10-1. The JV team went on to win the conference victory.

"One of the best games of the season was when we played Dowling," said Sellers. "It was just great to beat them at their own house 2-0."

Sellers and the rest of the JV team went on to win their conference with a record of 10-1. Not only was JV successful, but the 9th grade team won their conference as well with a record of 9-4-1.

"Looking back at the season the 9th grade girls had the determination to excel their abilities and improve as the season went on," said freshman coach Lowell Long.

In recent years prior to the 06-07 season both 9th and JV softball teams have been successful in being the conference champs.

"For the past five years, I have coached the JV team and we have been conference champs every year," said Coach Pamela Heller. "But this year we were not able to win the conference championship. It was a disappointment, but we were able to win the state championship. We were able to win the state championship because we were able to win the state championship."

"While we were able to win the state championship, we were able to win the state championship because we were able to win the state championship. We were able to win the state championship because we were able to win the state championship."

It was a long road to success with the 9th grade team having a couple of injuries, including Maribeth Melber with shin splints.

"Even though Melber was injured she still tried her hardest to pitch for her team," said Long.

Both teams had to go through the stress of losing at least one game. The girls held strong and came out on top for many years in a row now. Like USA player Jennie Finch once said, "I don't want to be just a face, I want to go out there and prove something on the field." The 9th and JV teams have made this quote happen for EHS.

One dream

Story/Layout by: Allison Carrick

Boxing champion Muhammad Ali once said, "Champions aren't made in the gyms. Champions are made from something they have deep inside them- a desire, a dream, or a vision."

The varsity softball team achieved the ultimate goal of winning the state championship for the first time in 25 years by having a collective desire, dream, and vision.

"We have been in the top ten in the state all five years I have been at East. This team went to the next level because they adopted the theme 'One Team, One Dream' and did everything with a team goal in mind," said head coach Bob Ligouri.

The team finished the impeccable season with a record of 45-5 beating Linn-Mar in the championship game to finally win the elusive state championship.

"It was very emotional," said state champion pitcher alum Amanda Zust. "It has been a goal, not only of mine, but for everyone that has been involved with the East High softball program since we made it back to the state tournament in 2002. As all of our seniors were eighth graders at the time, we knew the state championship was what we wanted. Being our last game that we would ever play together, it made it more special that we all worked hard together to accomplish our goal."

Zust was named Elite Pitcher of the Year, 4A player of the year, and 1st team all-state captain for the 2006 season.

Ever wonder what it feels like to win a state championship in front of a large crowd of loud fans and being broadcasted on public television?

"Winning was the best feeling ever! How ever you think it feels, it's 100 times better than that. It's 100 times better than I ever thought that it would feel," said junior Mattison Sellers.

From the eighth grade team members, to the senior veterans, the team had a bond on the field and off the field through fun and strong work ethics,

"Work ethic was key to winning and not only by me, but by the whole team. Everyone put in the effort in the off season and it paid off in the end," said Zust. "This year our team had great chemistry. The bond we had made us a great team."

"We did a lot of team bonding activities. We played Disney trivia, tee-peed coaches, and we went out to eat a lot," said Sellers.

The words East Softball mean a lot more than just a high school team. It's been formed into a long standing tradition and a community to be reckoned with.

"The school and the community were incredible in their support. After every one of our tournament games our players went to the stands and thanked all the fans for their support. When we won the championship we had alumni from as far as back as 1946 and we also had future players as young as 4th grade," said Ligouri.

It's not always easy to say goodbye, but six senior had to say goodbye for a little while as they move onto the college field.

"I don't think you can ever really say goodbye to any of them and we never did really say goodbye. I know they will come back and always be a part of our family," said Ligouri.

Ian Beck sits in the pool at Johnston and swings his head around to see two things: he won and his time of 1:03.97 had broken the 24-year old record for 100 yd breaststroke.

"It was so awesome," Beck said. "I don't know how to describe that."

The season for the boys swim team of the East High Scarlets was eventful especially for Beck and the other state qualifiers. East, Lincoln, and Norwalk joined together for this season which brought new opportunities for each team.

"It was just super," said Head Coach Erin Lowe, "I'm so happy for the state qualifiers and Beck's new record."

Lincoln junior Jake Edwards, Beck, Norwalk senior Jamie Farrington, East sophomore Zac Mitchell, and Lincoln sophomore Jimmy Edwards all qualified for State this year.

But amongst all of the main highlights, the one that probably stands out the most is Beck's new record for 100 breaststroke. The record was previously held by East alum Jeff Richards in 1984.

"After 23 years, it's time that record came down," Richards said to Beck. "I'm sure that board was pretty dusty."

Farrington looks forward to his future in the water, as a Navy SEAL. He was accepted into the SEAL program in September. He passed the tests with one exception. "My eyes were a problem because the worst eyesight anybody can have is 20/200 and that's what I have," said Farrington.

Farrington's grandparents were both fighter pilots and he could be seeing combat in less than two years.

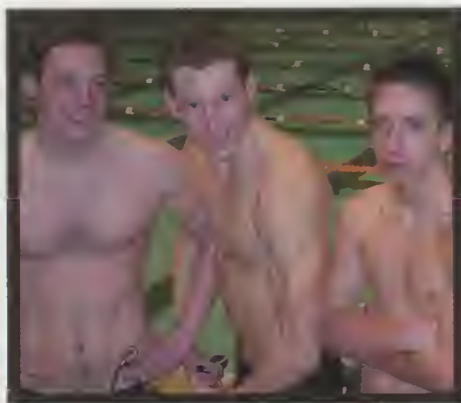

Farrington is also a mentor to two boys ages 10 and 11. They both lost their fathers and he tries to be positive role model to both of whom he calls his "brothers". They hope he will make it back safe.

"They're both scared, but they're happy for me," Farrington said.

"I don't know about you girls," Coach Stan Thompson said mysteriously to the girls swim team, "but I'm ready for a swim," he finished as he dove into the pool, fully-clothed, after an exciting win against Hoover.

"Coach Thompson made a deal with the team that if we beat Hoover (something the team hasn't accomplished in many years) that at the end of the meet we could push him in the water. It really pushed us that much more to swim our best times because we really wanted to see him get drenched," said junior Jade Manning.

The team had a couple of changes this season compared to past seasons. One of the changes was that the team managed to squeeze one more meet into their already jam-packed meet schedule. Along with the extra meet, the team's practices were more intense. The weight room was cut from the practice since it resulted in a lot of injured shoulders and arms and instead, more yardage was added to the workout.

"This year was different than my other years in swimming because we used to go to the weight room but a lot of the team was getting hurt and had to stop," said sophomore Kelsey Anderson. "Our practices were a lot harder and we ended up winning more meets," said senior Kelsey Anderson.

The changes made this year could have been the reason for the impressive record that the team ended with. The final record at the end of the season was 5 wins and 7 losses, an excellent record compared to seasons past.

"I'm really proud of our record this year even though we had more losses than wins; I'm happy how it ended. You just have to realize that we were up against a lot of good teams and we had a disappointing loss at Grinnell. We lost by one point and we would have won if they weren't given 15 extra points for diving. So to us, the record was more like 6-6," said sophomore Kyle Rowe.

The team was very close and often did group activities together outside of practice and meets.

"We all get along with one another and would go out to eat after the meets even if we lost, we all just had a lot of fun together," said freshman Riley Galvin.

Most coaches will say that there is more to a team than just one player, that it takes everyone to be successful. But in tennis that is exactly the opposite.

Unlike other high school sports, tennis is more of an individual game; warm-ups, practice, and even keeping score of the games is handled on your own.

"We pretty much do everything on our own," said senior Brett Tonear, "we can't even talk to the coaches when we're out there playing."

Many players enjoyed playing alone, but some of them realized that there's a certain comfort level playing with a team.

"Working by yourself is tough," said junior Ashley Kasper, "you only have yourself to lean on and that's not easy."

"I don't really think of it any differently," said senior Devon Cipperley, "but those days where you're not playing very well can be pretty hard."

The Scarlets went on to have a record of 1-8, in a close 7-4 win over North.

"I think that tennis is more about having fun with your friends than it is about winning games," said junior Mackenzie Schmitt, "this was my first year playing and I will for sure play again next year."

Ready & Set go

Story/Layout by: Hoang Nguyen

As the years keep passing by, athletes come and go.

Can we say that we are losing great team leaders as they graduate? Or are we gaining new freshman potential? For the boys track team, there are many star players to speak of.

A couple of years back, alum relay team, consisting of Daivon Daniels, Robert Thompson, London Hayes and Paris Thomas, set a record of 1:27:09 at state. The track team tries to shadow their great achievements.

"This year we have the same speed, just a little bit better," said senior Brandon Brown.

Brendon Kerber and Dusty Reed from last year's track team have made their mark in East's track history. If you ask coach Mel Green, it's the coaches' "purpose to mold and shape the future history for the boys track team."

"We were a young team as far as experience goes. We finished eighth at state out of 25 teams," said Green.

Star athletic runners from cross country have no problem showing dedication on the track.

"I run cross country during the beginning of the year, so that helps get me in shape for track season," said senior Logan Miller. "We also have clinics in the winter time."

Even with track-related injuries, such as torn ligaments and over-stretched tendons, the runners continue with enthusiasm, according to coach Patrick Lewis.

"All of them show a whole lot of promise. We just need to shape that talent into something we can use. All around, they are all good athletes that have a chance at beating the competition," said Lewis.

Lewis, along with Green tried new methods to get the team into better shape. For instance, pulling the runners out of their comfort zones, and have them run laps that they are not use to. Such as a sprinter running a long distance of 800m.

"For me, I do sprints and long distant running, so you really couldn't label me as anything, except for being a good athlete," said senior Larry Davis.

Sprinter
Aaron Jordan heads around the curve to the finish line. He was the state runner-up in the 200m dash at the Drake state meet.

I ran throughout the year. Running cross country in the fall helps a lot with my endurance and gets me in shape during the off-season. There's also clinics during the winter time.

Track may seem challenging—running, running, and more running. But with the high numbers of returning members and the swarm of new freshmen on the East girls' track team, there are many people who look forward to it.

Some people might think that track is boring, but the members of the girls' track team would say that it is rewarding and that they have a lot to show for a season of hard work and determination.

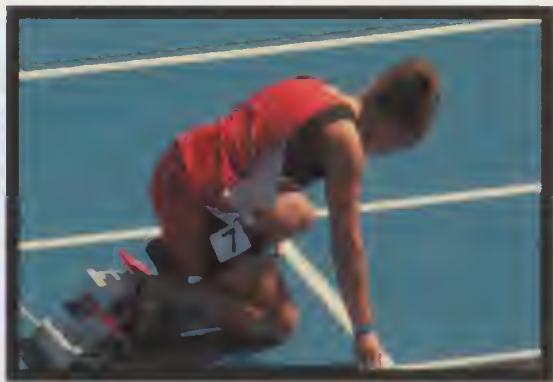

This year, the number of freshmen exceeded the number of members in any other class.

Like many others, freshman Tiffanie Porter ran on the varsity team and also made it to the Drake Relays for the 100m dash, the 200m dash, and the 4x100m relay.

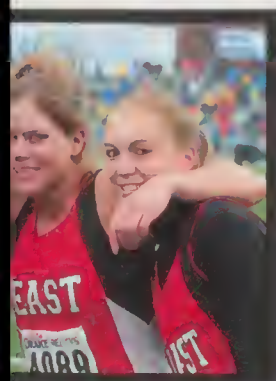

Success during the season was very high. Alum Natasha Brumbaugh, Mindy Carey, Carrie Hatfield, Mallory Johnson, and Sharmaine Lee kept up their achievements from previous years.

Not knowing who will come back or who will join makes it hard to predict the outcome of the next season, but in the words of coach George Davis, "We take the cards that we are dealt and make the best hand that we can out of those cards and somehow we always end up with a full house."

The team stretches together before the Waukee Invitational. The team participates in this meet every year.

Rough 'em up

Story/Layout by: Jennifer Harmon

The gym roars with noise, feet are stomping, fans are cheering, and hearts are pounding. It is the third game against Roosevelt and all the varsity volleyball players are ready to rough up the Riders.

On October 17, with 3 games lost, the team pulled together to do just that-win.

"When we got down 0-2, it took a lot of teamwork and effort to win," said senior Jennifer Radley.

With the first two games ending in defeat, the third attempt at winning looked doubtful as Roosevelt led 6-1. After Radley came back into the game, after being taken out from the second game for an injury to the nose, the team "started to turn around" said Coach Terrie Fenstermann, and won the last 3 games.

A lot was riding on the Roosevelt game. By winning, the team landed itself a second place finish in the CIML Metro League.

"We all knew that if we wouldn't have won, we wouldn't have moved on," said junior Laurel Murphy. "It made it a really important win for us. Not only was the win a great win for us in the Metro, it was also great for the fans' rights. The game took place on Roosevelt's senior night and at their school. There was even the defeat over their student section.

"They have 'Super Fans' and they have a lot of them, but our fans were yelling back and forth with their fans even though we were a fourth the size of them," said junior Makani Scarlett.

Fenstermann said, "The fans were unbelievable. Even parents were standing up, cheering and yelling. All the support gave the team the energy to win."

Along with school support the team used their close bonds to create many victories throughout the season. Many of the girls have known each other for years and play other sports together. These friendships, along with hard work and perseverance allowed the girls to end their season with a record of 8-27 and their 2 place Metro title.

To struggle hand to hand with (an opponent) in an attempt to throw him. This is what wrestling is according to Webster's Dictionary, but how is it defined by an East wrestler?

"It's very hard; it takes a lot of mental and physical strength. But at the same time it is fun because you get to know the whole wrestling family. I want to let all the younger wrestlers know that they should work hard in wrestling, as well as school, because in the end it pays off, even though it gets difficult sometimes," said varsity wrestler Bojan Djukic.

Cutting weight and taking names, this season was a remarkable one. With three tournament wins and nine dual meet victories under their singlet, the Searlets proved they are a force to be reckoned with.

"For the first time in the history of East, we were ranked in the top 10 and five of our wrestlers had individual rankings for most of the season. But we lost two of our dual meets because five of our wrestlers were suspended," said Asst. Coach James Giboo.

Djukic, along with Dusty McAninch, Nate Williams, Cody Price, and Johnny Coleman, were the hardworking handful, dubbed the 'Jackson Five', who qualified for state.

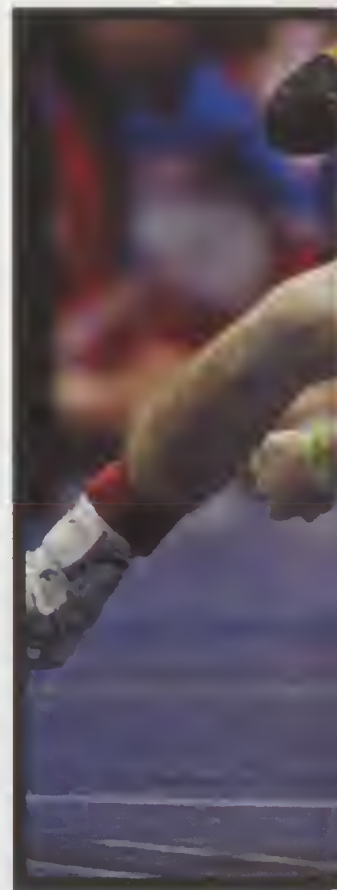

"Going to state was the best thing that could have ever happened to me because midway through the season, I was doubting myself and not thinking I was going to make it. I just believed in myself and I had a lot of support from my friends and family. Hopefully I can go back again next year," said Price.

The first round of the State Wrestling Competition was held at Wells Fargo Arena on February 22. Djukic, McAninch, and Coleman all advanced to the final round.

"It felt great being the only underclassman from East because I knew I had the chance to be a 3-time state champion," said Coleman.

Coleman placed 3rd, McAninch with 4th, and Djukic came in with 5th. Overall, East ranked 16th in the tournament with a total of 45 points.

"I didn't feel like I did my best because I didn't work hard enough to win my match. Hopefully this lets all the guys know to give it their all because if they don't, they will regret it for the rest of their lives," said Djukic.

Senior
Bojan Djukic hugs his father after pinning his opponent. This was the first time his father has ever attended one of his wrestling meets.

What did you do to lose weight?

"I lost weight by eating right weight I would put in a bottle just to make it easier."

"I lost weight with a lot of layers on, and I ate less than I usually do. It was hard but you have to be committed."

The
Coleman defeats
Cooper of Keokuk with a pin in the quarter finals.

after his match, senior Nate Williams holds his hand up high due to a victory against Johnston. Williams is a state qualifier as well as one of the team captains.
At bottom left, senior Bryan Loftus attempts to pin his opponent, to walk away with another victory.

CHAMPIONS

JOHNNY COLEMAN

Sophomore Johnny Coleman was a state qualifier. He was the CIML's 103 champion. Coleman ended with an overall rank of second in the state.

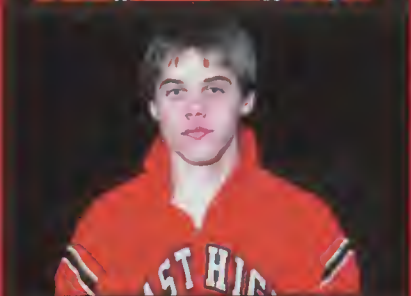

DUSTY MCANINCH

Senior Dusty McAninch wrestled at a weight of 130 pounds. McAninch was unsuccessful in winning his first match but on the second day he had no choice but to fight. McAninch was still able to place fourth in the state tournament.

BOJAN DJUKIC

Senior Bojan Djukic weighed 215 pounds and easily pinned the boys in his first two matches. In his first match he struggled and ended up losing a close match of 3-2 which ranked him 3rd in the state.

CODY PRICE

Sophomore Cody Price wrestled at a weight of 130 pounds. Price held his own for over 4 minutes but ended up getting pinned and was out of the first day.

NATE WILLIAMS

Senior and team captain Nate Williams trained for several 100 games. Williams was one of the best day before yesterday's wrestling competitors. See the wrestling special on pages 42-43.

IAN BECK

ZAC MITCHELL

JAKE EDWARDS

JAMIE FARRINGTON

BOYS' SWIMMING

Senior Ian Beck was a state qualifier for the 100 yard boys' race. Not only did he place 16th in state, he broke the swimming 1988 school record with a time of 1:03.02. Beck along with Freshman Zac Mitchell, Junior Jake Edwards and Senior Jamie Farrington were state qualifiers for the 50 yard time of 1:17.91. They finished by placing 24th in state. To read more see pages 42-43.

WRESTLING

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

The girls' basketball team finished with an impressive record of 19-5 at the end of their season. When the team won a victory over Marshall and Waterloo, they qualified for the state game. Girls' Basketball hasn't qualified for state since 1990. The girls fought hard against Valley in the first round of state tournaments. The game ended with a loss of 41-38. The girls still made our school proud. To read more about the girls' basketball season, see pages 122-123.

The Winter Guard Placed 2nd this year at the ISDTA State competition in December. Their show was entitled Angels and was in remembrance of September 11th victims. The squad worked with their coach Michelle Eggleston, and choreographer Peter Trimble, who flew out from California to work with them. The girls were proud to represent their school and their community.

WINTER GUARD SOFTBALL

The girls softball team finished with a record of 19-5. There were many games that were won by a close margin. The girls were very determined and played hard. The state game was a close loss to Valley. The girls still made our school proud. To read more about the girls' softball season, see pages 122-123.

Pre-Prom Jitters

Story & Layout By Ashley Kasper and Masyn Say

There are enough things in this school that would make you want to pull your hair out and scream at the top of your lungs. Getting everything ready for prom is just another thing that could send you into a stressful panic, so go ahead and check it off your list.

So where to start? There is of course the dress that needs to be hunted down at least two months in advance. Throw out that leftover Valentine's candy because it's time to start eating right, and don't forget that sun kissed tanning package that will make you look like you just stepped off a beach in Florida.

"I got my dress from Stacey's Dress Boutique before prom. I wanted to make sure I got the dress that I liked and I didn't have to worry about it. I'll still be sad to see Emily Ellenwood go, but I'll be happy to see her go."

to yourself. You need to make dinner reservations and rent a tuxedo.

"I got my tux two months in advance right after my girlfriend got her dress to make sure we would match," said junior Tim Bolander.

It may seem like a hassle to spend a fortune on tickets after you have already spent an arm and leg on your dress and accessories, but multiply that price by three and you'll get the cost of a place to dance at and music to go along.

"The prom committee spends around $3,000 for the DJ and Za-Ga-Zig Temple alone," said prom sponsor Sharon Link.

Prom isn't something that just one person can handle on their own. It takes many people working together to make it all happen. Prom is a big event and it's not something that can be done in a day.

willing to take a little stress upon themselves.

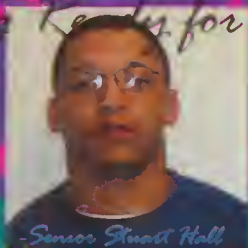

"I think the most stressful part of planning prom is when people say they will do something, but then they don't show up for the meetings and we have no idea what they have done or don't have done," said senior and prom chairman Addison Speck.

Everybody thinks of prom as a fairy tale night with beautiful flowing gowns, friends, and dancing the night away. For the brave souls behind the scenes, it's not exactly the fairy tale you might imagine.

"Prom is something that needs to be remembered forever, especially for seniors. We do all we can to make sure that everything is ready and waiting when the time comes," said senior and prom chairman T.J. Page.

Junior Mickie Phengsiaroun sifts through dresses at Stacey's Dress Boutique in search of the perfect one.

How Many Hours did You Spend Getting Ready for Prom?

"I usually spend about 15 hours getting ready. I pretty much devote my whole day to prom, but I try to stay as relaxed as I can."

"I spend less, two and a half hours getting ready. I get my tux that day, and I call up the date to make sure everything is going as planned."

"I didn't really take me that long to get ready. I went to get my nails and hair done and left for the dance around eight."

The act of reflecting or the state of being reflected, a thought occurring in consideration, an unfavorable remark or observation...

Look into a mirror. What do you see?
A reflection: past the face staring back at you, past the makeup, the hair, the piercings, what do you see?

Look back on your years in high school, and remember all the things that have made you who you are.

Remember the football games, cheering until your throat was sore, and your face red from the cold air, jingling your keys above your head hoping it would somehow make the ball go through the goal post.

Remember cramming all night for that science test and falling asleep with your head awkwardly resting on your open book, then waking up and rushing off to school only to realize that you left your homework at home.

Remember getting ready for the dance. Spending all day thinking about what you were going to wear and what you were going to do after it was all over with your friends.

Reflect.

Good and bad, all of these memories have helped mold and shape you. As you look back at the pictures and read the stories in this yearbook, reflect on what has gotten you to this point in your life... and remember your high school years.

Quill

Story/Layout by Jennifer Harmon

As a member of the Quill staff, I have a pretty big ego when it comes to this yearbook. I think all of the staffers do. This is what our whole year has boiled down to: 243 pages of pure beauty. Okay, so maybe it's not perfect, but if you find any typos, try to ignore them.

Being under the direction of our advisor Ed Kelly, our 3rd period lives are a little different than yours. First, we go by last names, I'm not really sure why, but we do. Second, we don't sit at a desk, reading a book and taking notes. We're either at our computers creating a sweet design, pleading with companies to support us with an ad, or frantically trying to get a quote from a teacher.

Sometimes the job can be pretty hectic. We have to write stories about subjects that we might not know about. We devote a lot of our time to the book, coming in before school and staying extra late. On occasion, Kelly makes us want to pull our hair out, and no doubt, we do the same to him. When we're not stressed to the max with deadlines we like to have a little fun. We are the masters at potlucks, and have them as much as we're allowed. Cheese and crackers, worms in dirt, pop, doughnuts, eggrolls; it's amazing. With all the craziness that is yearbook, it's nice to be able to produce something that students keep their whole lives. We hope we did you well, and we hope you enjoy it.

Nick Mongar, Katie Grimm, Casie Johnson, Tamisha Newberry, Katie Sturtz, Hannah Kilby.

remembering you then...

shy little girl...
big blue eyes...
always hiding behind our legs...

seeing you now...

intelligent...
beautiful...
and all grown up...

You have filled our hearts and our lives with love, pride and joy.

We love you and are so proud of you,
Mom and Dad

Adorable

When I was pregnant with you, people would ask me if I wanted a boy or a girl. I would say a boy. After all, boys are what I had experienced, with my brothers, Jesse, Becky's boys...but secretly I wanted a girl. I missed my mom so much. I wanted a daughter so I could have that mother/daughter bond again. Obviously things turned out for me. I am so happy to have you for a daughter! I am so proud of the person you've become! Love you

Jami
You are not only my sister, you are one of my best friends. Even though we fight a lot that doesn't change how I feel about you!
You will always be my sister and nothing will EVER change that. I will always be there to back you up in fights, I'll be there for you when you're crying about a boy,
I'll be there for you when your friends back stab you...basically what I'm trying to say is that whatever it is, I will ALWAYS be there for you! and I know you will always be there for me, and that's what makes you a GREAT sister.

Useless by what I wished for.

It seems like yesterday you were my beautiful little girl off to your first day of school. Time has gone by so fast and now you've grown into such a beautiful young lady that I'm so proud of in so many ways.

As you walk across the stage to receive your diploma and move on to the next chapter in your life, know that you are in our hearts and never far from our thoughts. You did it!

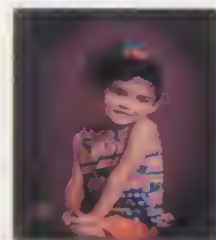

Live life to the fullest, be true to yourself, and know that you can do anything you desire.

I love you!

We looked at you today and saw the same beautiful eyes that looked at us with love when you were a baby.

We looked at you today and saw the same beautiful mouth that made us cry when you first smiled at us when you were a baby.

It was not long ago that we held you in our arms long enough for you to fall asleep--We'd just keep rocking you all night long.

We looked at you today and saw a beautiful daughter, no longer a baby, but a beautiful person with a full range of emotions, feelings, ideas, and goals.

Every day is exciting as we continue to watch you grow and we want you to always know that in good times and bad, we will always love you...

no matter what you do, how you think, or what you say. You can depend on our support, guidance, friendship, and most of all our Love, every minute of every day.

*With love,
Mom and Dad*

We're so proud of you. It's really hard to believe that our little girl has grown up so quickly. Seems like just yesterday you needed us for everything and today you are so independent (except for money).

Your morals and values are amazing and are going to help you to excel in all that you do.

As you take the next step and go off to college you have life and dreams ahead of you.

Stay strong, Be true to yourself~
Remember you can't go back!

Love you to the moon!

Where have all the years gone?
Time passed so quickly, and here you are....

a beautiful young lady.

Your determination, ambition, and drive will serve you well as you take the next step toward achieving your goals.

We are so proud of you!!!

Love,
Mom, Dad and Greg

Jen,
You have given us so many memories these past 18 years that bring joy to our hearts.
You have worked so hard and we are very proud of all that you accomplished so far.
Follow your dreams and your future will be filled with success and happiness.

Love,
Mom and Dad

Brett,
Life is such a wonderful journey with you. You started as our bouncing baby boy and have grown into a fine young man. You have set such high expectations and goals for yourself, and we know how determined you are to fulfill those goals and dreams. We also know that with your ambition for life you will succeed in anything and everything you set forth to do. You always amaze us with your desire for challenges and your aspiration to see them through. We are all very proud of you. We love you buckaroo!!!

Personally I'm always ready to learn, although I do not always like being taught.
 -Sir Winston Churchill

Imagination is more important than knowledge...
 -Albert Einstein

287

You see things and say
'Why' but I dream things and say 'Why not?'
-George Bernard Shaw

Always do right. This will gratify some people and astonish the rest.
-Mark Twain

Never look down on anyone, unless you're helping him up.

-Jesse Jackson

There are more love songs than anything else. If songs could make you do something we'd all love one another.

-Frank Zappa

Yesterday's just a memory, tomorrow is never what it's supposed to be.
-Bob Dylan

Fake it until you make it.

If it is worth doing, it is worth overdoing.
 -Steven Tyler

The one thing that can solve most of our problems is dancing.
